Council Race: Krasne in first place, Delshad in second

With final result pending, city council election's outcome to be determined Friday

By Eric Michael Stitt

Nancy Krasne leads the Beverly Hills City Council election, with final winners not to be determined until Friday after the remaining provisional and absentee ballots will be counted.

Nancv Krasne

Krasne leads with 2486 votes. Vice Mayor Jimmy Delshad 2192, followed narrowly by Mayor Steve Webb with 2185. Maggie Soleimani had 1954 votes, Shahram Melamed received 1040 and Lizza Morales claimed 324.

"I don't know what the outcome will be," Krasne said. "If I don't (win), I will support whoever wins, whoever sits up there, because that's the voice of the community.'

Webb's reaction was similar.

"The outcome is far from final," Webb said. "We're just going to have to wait until Friday afternoon."

As of Wednesday morning, Webb wasn't sure if he'd hire an attorney to supervise the count.

"It depends on the result and if the entire election process continues to be run properly," Webb said.

Unofficial results are 5,701 ballots cast with 892 provisionals outstanding.

Fredric Woocher, an election law attorney, said if someone for example, tried to challenge the voter registration based on citizenship, their attempt would likely be unsuccessful.

"It would be very difficult to prove that an issue has been raised," Woocher said about making sure that only citizens are registering. "It used to be an issue (but) the registration laws have tightened up and voters have to show forms of I.D. like driver's license and social security card number."

He said such a process would be lengthy and difficult because they have to get the person on a witness stand to prove they actually did go to a poll and vote.

Robin Chancellor, Director of Communications for the City of Beverly Hills, said all the absentee ballots that were received no later than Tuesday and the provisional ballots are being verified as the winners will officially be announced late Friday afternoon.

As for some of the candidates' state of mind, Krasne is going to Italy over the weekend to relax and get out of the spotlight, she said.

"I'm going to go clear my head and look at some great art. I'll walk the streets and nobody will know who I am. I'll be anonymous," Krasne said.

As for Webb, he's staying in town and feeling optimistic.

"I'm actually fine. "I've received a lot of phone calls of good wishes," Webb said. "I can look back with pride win or lose."

Regardless of the outcome, Krasne said she wants what's best for the community.

"It doesn't matter who comes in first, second. What's important is this city comes together as one," Krasne said.

However, if elected, she will continue to carry on a tradition of representing the people and that will not change, she said.

"If I'm going to have the opportunity to sit on that desk as City Council member...my goal is to going to stick to my plan." Krasne said. Delshad could not be reached for com-

Horace Mann students conduct walkathon for spinal cord research

Ten years ago Jesse Billauer became a quadriplegic when his spinal cord broke after he was thrown from his surfboard into a sandbar. On January 18th, he spoke with Horace Mann students about the incident that happened when he was 17. Billauer is the founder of a non-profit organization Life Rolls On, which raises money for spinal cord injury research. As a motivational speaker, he tours the nation talking to school children about overcoming adversity and living life to its fullest no matter what their disability is.

A week later the students participated in a school-wide walkathon to raise money for the Life Rolls On Foundation. Students received sponsors for the event and walked the track throughout the day while listening to music. A few students spent a majority of their time in a wheel chair to better understand what it would be like if they had to be in one everyday. The walkathon generated over $9,200 that will be donated to the LRO Foundation.

What Happened In The Election?

If you thought it was over, not quite yet By Rudy Cole

The only thing we can write with any certainty is there was a Beverly Hills City Council election and there are two possible winners. In one of the most bizarre contests in Beverly Hills campaign history, the final results now rest with the counting of what are considered provisional ballots.

First, what we do know is that Nancy Krasne is a very likely winner and that Vice Mayor Jimmy Delshad is leading for the second spot, but not by sufficient votes to assure election. A record number of "provisional" ballots will be counted in the next few days with a probable conclusion next Monday. In a very strange twist, the contest now is between two incumbents, Mayor Steve Webb and Delshad with an outside chance for challenger Maggie Soleimani who was only 200 votes out of the winners' circle.

What are provisional ballots? These are ones accepted at the polling place but questioned for a number of possible reasons: Are they possible duplicates of absentee ballots? Voters who came to the wrong polling place? And even voters who insisted they were legally registered but not on the county clerk's list. Those are the largest number, but there could also be ballots that were questioned by the voting machines for a variety of reasons including questionable markings.

City Clerk Byron Pope will verify these "provisionals" and then count or reject them. But here's where the fun begins: If the election is very close, the challenged ballots will be reexamined during a possible recount where they could be a cause for court tests, something that has been considered in one previous school board race in 1993 that initially had one candidate, Michael Karlin, ahead of Jo Ann Koplin by one vote. Koplin won the recount by four votes, but Karlin did not take the count to court.

A last minute flurry of attack pieces against Krasne probably assured her victory. A clumsy effort to label Krasne as "pro-growth" despite her backing by a homeowner association that had fought developments such as the Montage Hotel and Gardens project, was quite bizarre. At this writing identification of the group responsible could not be determined, but it is very unlikely that it came from antigrowth groups or individuals.

What also dramatically changed the campaign was the design of the ballot by the city clerk and the inclusion of a larger than previous Farsi translation. This led to some angry phone calls and conflicting editorials in the Beverly Hills Courier (we don't need foreign languages) and the Los Angeles Times (nothing wrong with translations that help people understand the ballot) or some such arguments.

What was difficult to measure was the appeal candidates were making to cultural groups. Not one of the non-Persian candidates made an issue out of their opponents ethnic identifies. However, all three of the Persian candidates campaigned very hard for those votes. Delshad made much of his heritage, asking for votes because he would become the first Iranian in America to become a city's mayor. Actually, that honor fell to another community

The election even made the front page of the Wall Street Journal, a story that focused on Delahsd's efforts to become the city's first Iranian mayor and on the ballot controversy.

The so-called experts were all predicting the Delshad would be in a close race with Krasne for second place and that Webb would lead comfortably. However, in recent elections, being mayor has not been a ballot asset. Although winning comfortably, then Mayor Linda Briskman ran third in 2005 and two years earlier, then Mayor MeraLee Goldman lost a reelection to challenger Delshad. In the last 10 or 15 years other then mayors who lost reelections included Robert K. Tanenbaum and Annabelle Heiferman.

How important were issues in the campaign? Voters sent a mixed message. Krasne had the strong backing of the Beverly Hills North Homeowners who accused the council of being too supportive of developments, but at the same time probably chose one of two councilmembers the association targeted for defeat. The association also supported Soleimani who was running a close fourth. What probably most hurt Soleimani was the three hundred votes that went to Monet-Morales and to the other Iranian candidate and council critic Shahram Melamed who had a disappointing 1,040 votes, over 900 behind Soleimani.

Although there were three Iranian contenders, they were very competitive and made no effort to hide their differences. Totalling the votes of the Iranian and non-Iranian candidates showed some interesting results. Despite the Farsi ballot flare up, the combined votes of the three Iranian candidates totaled 5,189 to the non-Iranians 4,998, which probably means that there was considerable mixing and matching among voters from both communities.

Soleimani did extremely well in her own far north precinct and at El Rodeo where she is a key education leader and in many renter dis-

If Delshad does edge Webb, it will be because of his strong, last minute get out the vote drive. When an election is this close, the run for number two, any small incident could have made a difference. Webb did have a minor run-in with a southwest resident that resulted in an email urging his defeat. Webb had responded to what he labeled an attack "on my integrity" by a southwest resident in an emotional, personal letter which the resident than made public. Webb may have also borne the brunt of many voters dislike of the loss of two hour free parking, but it was the intensity of the vigorous, high spending drive of Delshad that may have turned the election around. He did trail Webb in the absentees.

Next week, when the final results are finally made public, we will have a much clearer vision of the meaning of this election. However, there is very likely to be a mammoth sigh of relieve that it is over. The flurry of mailers, the programmed telephone calls, the inordinate attention to the ballot design and the harsh tone of the various attack pieces turned off many residents and may have been the reason a majority of voters simply stayed home.

Aside from the candidates, there were other losers in the election. Both community newspapers backed Webb and Delshad, with the Courier editorializing against Krasne. Most of the political establishment supported Webb and opposed Krasne and the repercussions could be felt in the next council race. This column, while making no endorsements, did give high ratings to Krasne, Webb and Soleimani. Sometimes endorsements really can't deliver votes.One of the popular leaders in our city, at least when he served on the school board, was Dr. Willie Brien. But his backing of Melamed wasn't sufficient to make Shahram a serious challenger.

The candidates themselves stayed reasonably positive, but the community needs some breathing time, some closing of ranks. There are far more things that unite us then keep us apart, and we need some leadership to express that in the weeks ahead. As for changes in city government, those will not be very noticeable, at least at first. Krasne does have a mandate for change, but she will have to work with a majority that has differed on only a few issues in recent months.

We should be grateful to all the candidates for making the effort and for their willingness to serve. Someday, we may even convince a majority of residents to vote. Who knows what could happen then?

Pope did a good job in processing the election results, but there were problems at polling places and, during the campaign, issues on forums, designs of ballots and more that need to be reconsidered by this council before the next election. As for any possible candidates for 2009, if any announce within the next 30 days, I will personally campaign against them. Let's give it a rest.

Reversal Of Fortune

BHHS boys' track team defeats Peninsula after 38-point loss in 2006.

Bv Steven Herbert

Dominance in the sprints and a sweep of the relays helped give Beverly High a seasonopening 71-65 victory over Palos Verdes Peninsula in a nonleague boys' track meet last Thursday at Peninsula.

The Normans got 14 of a possible 18 points in the 100 and 200 meters, with Ramon Judkins and Gerald Hill going 1-2 in the 100 and Hill winning and Makan Khodabakhsh finishing third in the 200.

Beverly Hills began the meet by winning the 400 relay in 43.8 seconds. Its team of Elliot Peaks, Judkins, Dominique Sandifer and Hill were 0.7 seconds ahead of the Panthers.

The meet winner was in doubt until the final event, the 1,600 relay. It was won by the Norman quartet of Peaks, Judkins, Sandifer and Jon Simmons in 3:34, two seconds ahead of Peninsula.

Beverly Hills also got victories from Chatura DeSilva (3,200); Brandon Kim (discus throw); Shahyad Meshkaty (shot put); Sandifer (110 high hurdles, 300 intermediate hurdles) and Simmons (800).

The Normans lost to the Panthers, 86-48, last season.

Girls' Track and Field Peninsula 82, Beverly Hills 49

Valerie Wirtschafter (1,600, 3,200) was the only individual event winner for the Normans in a season-opening meet last Thursday at Peninsula.

Beverly Hills also won the 400 relay as the team of Erica Hill, Sasha Rudes, Tanya Djafar and Ashley Austin was timed in 52.2, 10 seconds ahead of the Panthers team.

coverstory NOWRUZ CELEBRATION IAPA's Sunday event to honor teachers

By Eric Michael Stitt

While celebrating the Iranian New Year with traditional festivities, the NowRuz Extravaganza will also honor Beverly Hills' teachers at a bi-annual celebration in the Beverly Hilton Hotel on March 11th.

Dr. Nanaz Pirnia, who is founder and president of the Iranian American Parents Association, said the 3-10 p.m. event will display all traditions of the Persian culture while music and dance continuously engulf the international ballroom.

Having taken eight months to prepare the occasion, Pirnia said she is looking for every attendee to be ecstatic throughout the entire celebration.

As they walk through the lobby traditional Persian music will welcome them as well as gifts. The IAPA has hand picked the best of Iranian art, instruments, garments and jewelry to be showcased along with entertaining poetry readings. People can also participate in carpet weaving and there will be an authentic Persian tearoom and a cuisine that compliments the environment enriched with musicians and dancers donning traditional Persian attire.

The IAPA claims its 14th bi-annual event will help bring a greater understanding of the community's diversity and culture.

The Board of Education and City Council members are special guests along with the teachers of the BHVSD who will be recognized for the roles they play in the lives of children everyday.

"We always honor teachers because we feel that they are so important and they do such a wonderful job that they need to be treated like a king and queen for a day," Pirnia said.

Part of acknowledging the New Year in the Iranian culture involves everyone giving a gift, she said. So the IAPA will offer special presents to the vast amount of teachers who will be in attendance. Pirnia encourages parents to bring their children because they have an opportunity to feel very proud about their culture and share it with those who influence being honored because she was a foster child and the IAPA wants to shine light on the success she has made since evolving from foster care. And Sarshar will be noticed for the dedication and effort given through 14 years of community activeness.

"We are hoping to bring everyone together to celebrate culture because it is culture and not space that comes between people," Pirnia said. "The Iranian-American community feels that we want give something back and to make ourselves known to our community."

NowRuz means new day and begins March 20th lasting for almost two weeks. It brings hope, peace and prosperity to the world and has been celebrated among people regardless of ethnic background, political views or religion, according to Pirnia.

"It's a time for hope, to reunite and celebrate a new year with happiness," she said.

De. Nanaz Pirnia, Ali Pirnia, Hoda Kord, Nadia Nourian, and L.A. County Supervisor Michael Antonovich at IAPA event them.

Bita Milanian is attending the NowRuz Those also being honored at the Extravaganza for the first time and will be volunteering. "It's an honor for me to contribute to the community and give a positive image to Iranian-Americans," said Milanian who is an IAPA advertising coordinator.

She added there are so many misconceptions regarding this particular culture. So the IAPA's event helps to inform others and welcome them as friends into the unique atmosphere.

The IAPA has been making a positive difference in how the American culture perceives the Persian one by making itself known to the community and its schools, Pirnia said. Their efforts have encouraged people to be comfortable with the different aspects of their culture, especially since there is such a negative feeling toward Iran, she said.

"NowRuz to us is a celebration shared with everyone around the world," Milanian said.

Observation of a new year brings an outlook that is new and fresh while sending out a message of unity through celebration, Milanian said

Nadia Nourian, who is the first vice president and treasurer of IAPA, has been involved with the occasions since the IAPA started in 1994. She said being able to see the joyful reaction of people partaking in the festival is one of the reasons she continues to come back.

This organization helps Iranian-Americans make a difference in the school system.

"It shows Iranian parents the importance of involvement," Pirnia said. "It's a chance to give back to this wonderful American society."

But most importantly she added, the NowRuz Extravaganza is a chance for the children to be proud of their culture and to help educate others in a very uplifting way.

"They love the traditions and all want to volunteer and bring their teachers and show them what their culture is all about," Pirnia said.

Tickets are $100, age 12 and older. For more information see www.iapabh.org or call (310) 289-7161.

IAPA committee chairpersons are Pirnia, Denny Fitzpatrick, Nourian, Helen Nassi, Farimah Fayyad, Milanian, Nini Yarmo, Niki Manavi, Taraneh Hariri, Shideh Shahraies, Bahman Mojallal, Shida Shirazi, Shahrzad Ardalan, Suzi Khatami, Hoda Kord.

Net proceeds from the event will be donated to Beverly Hills Unified School District, Exceptional Children's Foundation, L.A. County Foster Home Program and The Maple Counseling Center.
