“Will they run?” [Issue #670]

In Rudy Cole’s Aug. 2 column, he writes regarding the upcoming city election that “...there have been some differences on a few issues by the five councilmembers, but few of these are likely to impact the election. Mostly, the candidates will win or lose on personal popularity and effectiveness of their campaigns.” OMG!! With all the dividing issues that have faced this community especially the Metro issue and Roxbury, I dare to say that these are major differences that mirror the vision that councilmembers have of our City and how they regard its citizenry. Often the truth is seen in the process, and turnarounds are a little too late and not at all convincing.

It is an insult to assume that residents are so unintelligent and uninterested in their city that elections take on the shallowness of popularity contests and dog and pony shows. If they do, then we deserve what we get!

Christine Skirmuntt Ford

RUDY COLE RESPONDS:

Reader Ford is right. Ideally, elections should be based on issues, not personalities. However, our campaign history often demonstrates that many other factors impact our choices.

Two examples: In 1986 there were four strong candidates. Two had opposed and two supported a proposed hotel development, the major issue in the election. Rose Norton and Robert K. Tanenbaum opposed the hotel and Maxwell Salter and then-Mayor Annabelle Heiferman were in support. Tanenbaum and Salter both won, and they could not have been further apart on other issues as well. For the record, Norton ran ahead of Heiferman.

In a more recent election, 2009, Barry Brucker, Dr. Willie Brien and John Mirisch all won. They had sharp differences on issues, but two other candidates with very similar views as Mirisch, lost: Former Mayor Richard Stone and former Board of Education member Virginia Maas.

As for her assumptions that there are “major issues” in the upcoming elections, not as significant as she suggests. On the subway route, the whole council supported a position paper prepared by Vice Mayor Mirisch and Mayor Brien. As for Roxbury, a work-in-progress, compromises are very likely to lead to a consensus. Also, a vast majority of residents may indeed not agree with some of the immediate neighbors’ opposition to much needed improvements, including our large senior adult population, youth sports parents and other park users.

Council compromises on new Roxbury community center proposal

After years of study and many meetings, the City Council came to consensus Tuesday afternoon to move forward with plans to build a new Roxbury Park community center at the site of the existing community center.

Although Mayor Willie Brien and councilmembers Barry Brucker and Julian Gold stated their preference for Option D, which would site the one-story community center slightly north of the existing building, the City Council agreed to move forward with plans for Option E on the existing building's footprint, which was supported by Vice Mayor John Mirisch and Councilmember Lili Bosse. Brien, Brucker and Gold said they would all be comfortable with Option E.

"Overall, all five of us said to some degree E is preferable. I would propose going forward with E," Brien said.

On Wednesday morning, Bosse, who proposed Option E at the July 24 study session after learning the City can relocate and build over its existing storm drain, said she was thrilled the council came to unanimous consensus.

Bosse said some of the benefits of Option E include that it is closer to what the community wanted and would not require eliminating a half outdoor basketball court or changing the existing outdoor basketball court to an east-west orientation. At the last study session, the city council agreed to remove indoor basketball from the multipurpose room.

"I feel that everybody on the council on some level compromised. I don't think anybody on the council got everything that they wanted and I think that's probably even true for residents as well, but I think given that fact, I'm proud of the final decision," Bosse said. "There are still a few tweaks that are going to be done, but I feel that E really represents what this community wanted."

Brucker shared similar comments Wednesday.

"We may have some minor tweaking to do, but when you can get a 5-0 vote on this project, it showed that all five councilmembers were willing to not get everything they wanted but get most of what everybody wanted, and that's always a good outcome," Brucker said.

Brucker said he thought the differences between D and E were subtle, but he preferred D because its "configuration allowed for the multipurpose room to be sunk into the ground, thus not being so looming when viewed from the park, and secondly it allowed for expanded green space, which when you invert it into E, unfortunately we can't take advantage of the expanded green space opportunity."

In Option D, the multipurpose room is located on the northwest corner of the facility, but in Option E, the multipurpose room is located on the southwest corner. The existing multipurpose room is located on the facility's southeast corner.

Brucker said advantages of the new facility include a more functional kitchen in compliance with County standards for use by seniors, an indoor patio with a view of the park, and a larger library annex and computer center.

Before moving forward with Option E, Mirisch and Bosse said they wanted more comprehensive information about what it would cost to renovate the existing facility. A few months ago, consultant C.W. Driver presented an approximately $6.1-million estimate for bringing the building up to code, but it did not include the cost of abating hazardous materials that might be behind the walls or any aesthetic improvements.

"That wouldn't necessarily have meant we wouldn't have built a new facility, but I think in fairness to the residents, I think the more information we have, I think the more fiscally responsible we are," Bosse said.

Brien said Tuesday afternoon he believed the council had sufficient information to make a quality decision.

The "tweaks" Brucker and Bosse mentioned may have to do with the size of the multipurpose room, which was proposed at approximately 5,100 square feet. It could be reduced in size to allow for a drop-off area. Option E proposes 51 onsite parking spaces, but no drop-off area. The current facility has 47 spaces.

Since the proposed building is similar in mass and scale to the existing building and intensification of use is not expected to increase, Bosse said an environmental impact report, which would include a parking study, is not required.

"I would always love to have more parking but I think you have to look at where Roxbury is. Roxbury is not surrounded by a lot of open land. It's not in a commercial district. It's in a residential area, and there's only so much we can do," Bosse said. "But again, I do think there might be some leeway with some aspects of the plan that provides more parking."

No cost estimates were presented Tuesday, but Associate Project Manager Donielle Kahikina said as the proposed plans go into the design phase, the City would work with a cost estimator to make sure the project stays within budget, which is $14.65 million from the capital improvement budget.

"I think it's really important during this process as we move forward that we keep having status updates every number of months to make sure the costs are in check and to keep the community in the loop as to what is happening with the facility and what the costs are," Bosse said.

After bids came in over budget last December, the City Council's Recreation & Parks liaison committee, led by Brien and Gold, was tasked with revising plans for the community center. The committee held a series of meetings that were open to the community.

"I do believe when people realize we're building a new facility far more efficient and far more functional, we're retaining green space in the park and we're going to fix the park up as a whole, this is a victory for everyone," Brien said. "The building structure itself is on a smaller footprint than the existing footprint, and yet it's still going to be aesthetically designed in a way that is not a box. I think from that standpoint, we listened and we dealt with all the issues the best we can. We compromised where we needed to to get this done. I think that's ok; that's the process. In the end, I think the community is going to be better served for it."

Spadaro faces 20 charges in latest State Bar Court trial, now underway

Charlotte Spadaro

A State Bar Court trial began Monday related to more alleged misconduct by former Mayor Charlotte Spadaro in her practice as a lawyer.

Spadaro, who served on the Board of Education from 1979 to 1983 and the City Council from 1984 to 1988, faces 20 disciplinary charges related to nine cases and a matter involving eight different clients that hired Spadaro to file a class-action lawsuit against the property owner of the mobile-home park where the clients live.

The cases have been consolidated for trial, and are scheduled to be heard through Aug. 30. Spadaro is representing herself in the proceedings.

In March 2011, Spadaro was sentenced to three years of probation for her conviction of an animal cruelty misdemeanor for keeping nearly 200 dogs and cats at a facility in San Bernardino County.

Then last September, Spadaro, who has represented herself in all legal proceedings, lost her case in State Bar Court related to a client matter. Part of her penalty involved a suspension of her license to practice law for at least a year, but the suspension is pending appeal. A date for the appeal hearing has been set for Aug. 14.

According to that complaint, Spadaro allegedly failed to repay her client Phyllis Williams unused advance attorney fees and a series of loans and investments totaling $26,500, and failed to avoid interests adverse to a client. Spadaro denied Williams was ever her client.

Spadaro said Monday's proceedings related to a bankruptcy matter for clients Mario and Esperanza Maciel.

Allegations include Spadaro filed inaccurate and deficient forms on her clients' behalf, failed to file essential forms related to the clients' case, failed to appear for scheduled hearings on her clients' behalf, failed to respond to clients' inquiries, failed to provide a refund of $2,500 unearned fees to her clients, and failed to provide "legal services of value" to her client. In her filed response, Spadaro denied the majority of the allegations.

"I don't think there is one charge in there that makes any sense," Spadaro said by phone Monday afternoon. "It's a waste of the dues that attorneys pay to the bar."

According to the filing, Spadaro owes the Maciels $2,500 based on an arbitration award from the Riverside County Bar Association. Spadaro said she informed the arbitrator's office she would not be able to attend the hearing, but it went ahead anyway. Spadaro claims she later prevailed in Riverside County small claims court against the Maciels.

State Bar attorney Erin McKeown Joyce, who is prosecuting Spadaro's case, referred the Weekly to the State Bar's communications department. Spokesperson Amy Yarbrough said the small-claims court ruling is not part of the case record.

Spadaro, who said she devoted hundreds of pages of work to the Maciels' case, said eventually the Maciels got their bankruptcy discharge, but the State Bar says it was another attorney that made that happen.

An additional disciplinary charge against Spadaro relates to the San Bernardino kennel matter and a personal bankruptcy filing, claiming Spadaro made false representations in court when she claimed she had been granted an extension by the bankruptcy court to keep dogs at the kennel and that she had listed the dogs as an asset on her bankruptcy filing.

In her response, Spadaro wrote she was licensed to have the dogs at the kennel facility until the landlord "maliciously refused to renew the kennel license on the property." She claimed her vehicle was struck by a drunk driver in December 2009 and she spent until the following February in the hospital. She says she was still hospitalized and unable to walk at the time she was asked to remove her dogs from the kennel.

Another case alleges four counts of misconduct related to a client-trust account for failing to maintain sufficient funds to cover paying for a medical lien against one of her clients and commingling her own personal funds in the account to pay for personal and business expenses. One of the counts alleges Spadaro, in response to an inquiry from the State Bar, misrepresented events regarding a $1,000-check that did not clear from the account.

In her filed response, Spadaro admits she set up a client-trust account in December 2010 and authorized check-signing authority to herself and Edgardo Flores. She also admits "in part" alleged facts of the case related to writing the $1,000-check to a doctor on behalf of one of her clients, but she otherwise denies or claims she has insufficient information or recollection to respond to the other allegations.

Spadaro asserted there were at all times sufficient funds in the account to cover the $1,000 aforementioned payment. In response to an allegation that a $35-overdraft fee assessed to the client-trust account brought the balance down to zero, Spadaro wrote, “respondent denies the allegations therein and wonders why the prosecutor at no time mentions the existence of the new trust account, which took the place of the old account, and which, at all times, had more than sufficient funds to cover any and all checks issued. Is this just a game to the prosecutor?”

Planning Commissioner Nan Cole resigns

Nan Cole

Nanette Cole has resigned from the Planning Commission, citing a “sudden change in circumstances” in an e-mail to Mayor Willie Brien dated July 11.

City Clerk

Byron Pope said Cole’s resignation was effective Aug. 3. Cole did not attend or participate in a Planning Commission meeting that took place on that date.

According to Planning Commission Chair Craig Corman, Cole did not communicate to him her decision to resign. At the Aug. 3 commission meeting, staff read an e-mail from Cole that said she would not be attending the meeting, but the e-mail did not indicate Cole was resigning.

“This occurs just as I have sold my home in the process of ‘downsizing’ with the intention of locating another home in Beverly Hills; this process is now interrupted for at least several months during which I will no longer have a full-time home in Beverly Hills,” Cole wrote to Brien.

The Coles’ North Elm Drive home sold in June for approximately $5.7 million.

Cole’s resignation comes at a time when she and her husband Bruce Cole are named defendants in a pending lawsuit related to a failed business venture Bruce Cole, then-CEO of Mamtek, spearheaded in Moberly, Mo. According to a report from Missouri newspaper Columbia Daily Tribune, $868,000 left over from the home sale is in escrow awaiting a ruling on the lawsuit.

Missouri Governor Jay Nixon visited Moberly in 2010 to announce Bruce Cole’s company, Mamtek U.S. Inc., would soon break ground on a sucralose manufacturing facility that was expected to create 612 new jobs in the small town of approximately 14,000 residents. Mamtek described its SweetO sucralose product as a “healthy sugar substitute.” The City of Moberly committed to a $39-million bond to help finance the construction of the production facility.

Ever since Mamtek missed a $3.2-million bond payment last September, Columbia Daily Tribune has extensively covered the Mamtek project’s failure.

As a result of Mamtek’s failure to pay back the bond money to Moberly, Standard and Poor’s downgraded Moberly’s credit rating. Subsequent disclosures from bond trustee UMB Bank and Missouri press releases announced the Securities and Exchange Commission, the Missouri State Senate’s Governmental Accountability Committee, and the Missouri Attorney General’s office had all launched investigations into the Mamtek project.

After Mamtek eventually filed for bankruptcy, bond trustee UMB Bank took over the property with the partially built factory and Mamtek’s assets. On July 26, Columbia Daily Tribune reported UMB Bank plans to auction off the property and equipment, rather than continue to look for a potential buyer to complete the factory and get it up and running.

As of earlier this week, Bruce Cole has not been indicted, but UMB Bank has sued Mamtek in U.S. Bankruptcy Court. The Columbia Daily Tribune reported bankruptcy trustee Bruce Strauss has also sued Bruce and Nan Cole for allegedly using bond funds to save their North Elm Drive home from foreclosure and to pay Bruce Cole a monthly salary of approximately $30,000.

According to the Beverly Hills Municipal Code, a commissioner does not necessarily have to resign if they cease residing in the city, as long as it is temporary, meaning he or she intends to return to the City within six months.

The City is moving forward with the recruitment process for the vacancy. Applications will be accepted between Aug. 10 and Sept. 24.

Nan Cole did not return a phone call from the Weekly.

Deadline.com reports Paysinger book deal

The story of Carter Paysinger’s rise through the ranks from student to principal at Beverly High is slated to be the topic of a new book, according to a story on Deadline.com.

Paysinger has reportedly signed a deal with Howard Books, a division of Simon & Schuster, to write his memoir about growing up in South Central, attending Beverly High on a multicultural permit, and returning to teach, coach and eventually become principal of his alma mater.

Board of Education member Steven Fenton led the charge to hire Paysinger as principal, which Fenton described in an Issue #635 interview as “a brutal fight, and one in which I saw sides of some people that I didn’t like.”

Deadline.com reported several Hollywood producers have already showed interest in adapting Paysinger’s story for television or film.

Paysinger was not immediately available for comment.

Lily pond to return to Beverly Gardens Park

When the City of Beverly Hills celebrates its 100th anniversary in 2014, a committee of private fundraisers led by former resident Steve Gordon hopes also to celebrate the completion of its comprehensive restoration of Beverly Gardens Park, which spans 23 blocks of Santa Monica Boulevard.

Last month, the City Council unanimously decided to reinstate the lily pond in front of the Beverly Hills sign as part of the project. Since the sign is a popular tourist attraction, some councilmembers asked landscape architect Mia Lehrer to be mindful of the design so tourists could still approach the sign.

Vice Mayor John Mirisch said he thought it was a mistake the lily pond was removed in the past. Director of Community Services Steve Zoet said it is unknown why the City filled in the lily pond.

Lehrer provided the City Council with an update on the project at the study session on July 24. The project will involve restoring items including park structures like the restrooms and the pergola in the rose garden; paving and fencing; trees and hedges; and four water features.

The City Council was also asked to weigh in on whether or not to direct the existing walking path, which spans the length of the park, to the corner of each intersection so crossing occurs at controlled crosswalks and whether or not to install low-voltage security and landscape lighting. The proposed design would maintain the existing path, but add an option leading pedestrians to cross at the corner.

The City Council unanimously agreed on adding lighting, but expressed varied opinions regarding the walking path.

The majority of councilmembers supported directing the path to the intersection corners, but Mirisch supported leaving the path as it is and looking into installing crosswalks at the path crossings. Mayor Willie Brien supported maintaining the existing pathway.

Regarding lighting, Councilmember Barry Brucker suggested looking into solar-powered options.

The park restoration will be funded almost entirely by private donations, but the City might contribute up to $650,000 in remaining Proposition A funds to improve irrigation at the park. Proposition A was a 1992 and 1996 Los Angeles County ballot measure that raised funds for the acquisition, development, rehabilitation and protection of public open space.

Lehrer said the entire project is estimated at $10–12 million.

The Friends of Beverly Gardens Park fundraising committee is also involving the City’s Fine Art Commission to help select a commemorative piece of art for the park in recognition of the project’s donors.

“[Gordon] has agreed that the work of art will be selected by the Fine Art Commission and he would like signage for donor recognition, which was also determined that the Fine Art Commission would be making sure that the signage would be of our choice and it would be extremely discreet,” Commission Chair Terri Smooke said.

Lehrer said the committee would be hosting a community open house about the project in the Municipal Gallery at City Hall on Sept. 13 at 7 p.m.

California Geological Survey says BHUSD report does not adequately assess potential seismic issues at Beverly High involving trenching and core borings does not adequately assess fault-rupture hazard issues at the campus and have requested additional information from BHUSD’s consultants.

Geologists from the California Geological Survey (CGS) say BHUSD’s recent seismic study at Beverly High

Since sending a letter May 21 to BHUSD requesting additional information, CGS senior engineering geologist Jerry Treiman said CGS has met with BHUSD’s consul-

Keeping up appearances of the City's public art collection

When restoration begins shortly on several City-owned pieces of art, Fine Art Commission Chair Terri Smooke wants to treat it as an educational opportunity for the community.

Based on a presentation by a representative of art conservator Rosa Lowinger's firm, which the City has retained to restore the City's public art, the commission determined its first three priorities: Tony Smith's Playground and Henri Alfred Marie Jacquemart's Hunter and Hounds on Santa Monica Boulevard at Crescent Drive, and the redwood Spiral of Life by Baile Oakes on Rexford Drive at Burton Way.

Smooke said the goal is to begin the restoration work in the next couple of weeks.

Work is also expected to start soon on Yayoi Kusama's Hymn of Life: Tulips at Beverly Gardens Park to address dulling of the piece apparently related to the protective coating that was applied to the piece when it was installed. As the piece is under warranty, manufacturer Ironwood will service the piece at no expense to the City. Smooke said she expects the work to take about two weeks.

While the pieces undergo restoration, Smooke said they will still be visible, but temporary fences will keep them at a distance from the public.

"I think it's great for citizens to see restoration and conservation taking place," Smooke said. "We're really looking forward to it."

Smooke said improvements to Playground, Hunter and Hounds and Spiral of Life will be the beginning of the City's "regular maintenance program" to keep up the appearances of City-owned public art.

At the July 19 meeting, the Fine Art Commission continued its preparation for the acquisition and installation of its most recent purchase, a sculpture by Spanish artist Jaume Plensa, and establishing a sculpture garden in Beverly Gardens Park featuring the Plensa piece, the Kusama piece, and Roxy Paine's stainless steel Erratic.

The City plans to install a concrete pad for displaying the Plensa and lighting to show off the Plensa and Kusama, but the Fine Art Commission has requested more information from the two companies that submit bids before making a final decision.

Smooke said the Plensa Endless piece may be completed as early as next month. If that is the case, she said she hopes the piece will be installed by the end of the year.

The Commission expressed interest in buying a piece by Plensa called Endless III but another buyer purchased it before the commission made a final decision. Plensa agreed to create a similar piece for the City for $350,000, including shipping.

The City is paying for the artwork with the public art fund, which is maintained by contributions from developers. The City's fine art ordinance requires building developers to install fine art of a designated value at their properties, or contribute to the public fine art fund in lieu of installing art on site.

Civic Center may soon show off Obelisk

Civic Center may soon have a new artistic attraction.

At its meeting on July 19, the Fine Art Commission determined the Boat Court at Civic Center would be an appropriate location to show off Joan Brown's Center Obelisk, which was previously located at 9336 Civic Center Drive, the former Hilton Headquarters.

"The commission is very enthusiastic about this as a good placement for the work because it would have 360-degree visibility and access and there is circular seating around it," Smooke said. "It would be very nice for anyone to sit there and enjoy it."

Smooke said the commission would next present the location proposal to City Council liaisons, councilmembers Barry Brucker and Lili Bosse, for their approval.

Property owner Tishman Speyer, which decided to renovate 9336 Civic Center Drive, offered to repair and store Center Obelisk until the City found a location for it. The developer will be required to fulfill the City's public art ordinance with another piece of art or a contribution to the fine art fund. United Talent Agency has leased 120,000 square feet of office space and Playboy Enterprises Inc. has leased 45,000 square feet of office space in the former Hilton Headquarters.

Meanwhile, the City is continuing its preparation to install two other pieces that have been in the City's possession for a number of years.

The Fine Art Commission has recommended installing a mural by the late Southern California artist Millard Sheets above the entrance to the Civic Center parking structure off of Rexford Drive. Engineering consultants determined the garage entrance would be able to support the weight of the approximately 10,000-pound mural. Smooke said City staff is currently investigating how to install the piece. That piece, which has been in storage for 17 years, was previously on display at the Beverly Wilshire hotel.

The Fine Art Commission recently learned from artist Guy Dill it would be acceptable to display only two out of four components of Egalmah: The Great Palace, a massive concrete piece by Dill that was donated to the City approximately 10 years ago. The piece has never been displayed in the City because the commission has been unable to find a suitable location to support the weight and mass of the piece.

Smooke said a preliminary investigation indicated a location on Burton Way between Palm and Oakhurst drives should be able to support two of the pieces. On Monday, Assistant Director of Community Services Nancy Hunt-Coffey said the City still needs to determine if there are non-City utilities underneath the proposed location. Smooke said the commission has not yet decided what to do with the remaining two components of Egalmah.

tants, Leighton Consulting, several times, including on site at Beverly High. On Monday, Treiman said the last time CGS met with Leighton Consulting was July 12 at Beverly High to look at a coring sample.

In a phone interview Monday, Treiman said CGS still needs additional information from Leighton Consulting regarding potential fault-rupture hazards at the campus.

"There were a couple of issues we still felt needed some clarification. One was whether there was a suggestion in some of the data of faults in the West Beverly Hills Lineament (WBHL) or related to it possibly passing through the site," Treiman said.

Treiman said CGS also asked Leighton to look into potential east-west faulting related to the Santa Monica fault system, since Leighton Consulting's report only addressed potential presence of active faulting associated with the north-south WBHL.

Treiman said some of CGS's questions regarding the WBHL might be answered based on information Leighton Consulting has already compiled but has not yet presented.

CGS geologists visited Beverly High several times between January and May while Leighton Consulting was studying the trenches. Treiman said it appeared Leighton Consulting's methods were being carried out correctly.

"They're doing a very thorough investigation," Treiman said. "They do have some limitations on the campus from varied utilities and such that limit what they can see in some areas. We've discussed with the consultants how to work around that."

The May 21 letter, signed by Treiman and engineering geologist Brian Olson, outlined concerns CGS had with Leighton Consulting's report, including that small faults and gaps in data from one of the four trenches "leave open the question of both presence and activity of related faults on the site."

Leighton Consulting concluded clay-filled fractures found in the fourth trench were related to slope movement during strong seismic shaking and not faulting. While Treiman said that could be a viable explanation, he said CGS requires clarification.

"Some of the key issues we had was there was some indication from prior data from Metro's studies that faults might be projecting through the campus," Treiman said July 30. "We wanted the consultants to more thoroughly resolve the presence of the faults or the recency of activity."

After investigating the Beverly High campus, Leighton Consulting geologists and engineers concluded no active faults exist under the campus. They said no faulting associated with the West Beverly Hills Lineament (WBHL) has occurred in 70,000 to 100,000 years.

Vice President Jake Manaster confirmed July 31 more work is needed from the consultants.

BHUSD contracted Leighton Consulting Inc. to conduct a geotechnical investigation at the Beverly High campus following the release of Metro's geotechnical reports related to the Westside Subway Extension in October 2011.

Metro's report, which recommended the Metro board select Constellation Boulevard as the station location in Century City based on finding active faults near the proposed Santa Monica Boulevard station, also claimed an active fault exists beneath the Beverly High campus. Metro says it is possible to safely tunnel under the high school, but it is unsafe to locate a station at Santa Monica Boulevard.

The City and BHUSD have both filed lawsuits against Metro, claiming it violated the California Environmental Quality

Council unity And eastside improvements

By Rudy Cole

If you had the impression that our city council is inexorably divided and contentious, attending Tuesday's afternoon and evening sessions would have been somewhat of a surprise.

Few councils in my memory ever achieved more or with such a willingness to come together than this council, despite some enormous challenges and distractions.

The problems to be solved were complex with strong constituencies supporting many possible solutions; and constant media reports on supposed internal conflicts made reaching agreement more difficult.

But they came together: Roxbury Park will have a new community center and not just renovation of an outdated structure; most of the park users will be better served, and more important, the compromise passed with a five to zip vote, avoiding an escalation of an overblown conflict.

No one expected it to be easy. On one side were park neighbors, understandably concerned about escalating traffic and noise problems and on the other, the major park clients/users: seniors, youth sports and others.

So, no one received everything they wanted, certainly not all five councilmembers. But when it came time to vote, Mayor Willie Brien, Vice Mayor John Mirisch, Councilmembers Barry Brucker, Lili Bosse and Dr. Julian Gold acted for what was possible and pragmatic and not politically correct.

We will want to do a far more comprehensive report on all the elements of the adopted plans, but it is critical to know that the council avoided the debacle that could have come with attempting to renovate an existing and aging structure and approved a new, modern building.

There will be a new, far more utilitarian kitchen, one element of the approved plan that was most distorted by some opponents. It was never intended as a major catering facility aimed at competing with hotels or restaurants.

From early reports, it appears that some of the more vocal critics of the improvements were pleased by the compromise, and that too speaks well for our community.

Under the leadership of Mayor Brien, a record number of outreach meetings with stakeholders was held, aiming at a narrowing of differences, and it worked. A special nod to Vice Mayor Mirisch and Councilmember Bosse for helping achieve consensus, to Councilmember Gold for participating in the many neighborhood ad hoc meetings and to Councilmember Brucker who began the process when he was mayor.

Does this mean that this writer is completely pleased with the final result? Not quite. There is not likely to be an indoor basketball court and not a significant increase in parking, and there were other elements of the original plans that did not make the final cut. However, that should not distract from what was achieved.

Much of the credit for the tireless staff work that made this happen has to go to Community Services Director Steve Zoet, Deputy Director/City Librarian Nancy Hunt Coffey and to project manager, Donielle Kahikina who, along with Coffey, fronted the project—and did so brilliantly. Zoet did the crunching of the changing elements with great professional skill.

What was not quite as commendable was the lack of support the park plan received from park patrons. The city staff at the park needs to do a far better job in communicating with user groups and with neighbors. The mobilization of these very important parts of the process was inadequate.

What needs to be totally refuted is the erroneous claim that this park's users are mostly non-residents. It is not true, and never has been. However, what kind of message are we sending our neighbors? Yes, we want you to spend money at our stores, stay in our hotels and dine in our restaurants, but keep away from city parks? That is the worst kind of elitism, and insults our community values.

Conversely, would we want Los Angeles to create user resident tests for the zoo, Griffith Park, the Greek Theatre and other cultural and recreational assets funded mostly by Los Angeles taxpayers? I hope not.

Tuesday also had some other fine moments, and, prepare yourself, Vice Mayor John Mirisch actually led the charge for a business-friendly improvement program.

The target was the east side of the city and especially Robertson Boulevard. Under Mirisch's leadership a broadly based task force was created, working with city staffer David Lightner. Their goal was to find ways of attracting community-friendly retailers and restaurants, plus entertainment related uses such as motion picture theatres.

Community leaders working with Mirisch included Susan Mishler, AJ Willmer, Chris Biehl, Brian Goldberg, Howard Goldstein, Andrea Grossman (who hopes to create a bookstore in the area), Dick Seff, Isabel Hacker, Don Creamer and Noah Margo.

Committee members who spoke at the afternoon study session were quite right. This has long been one of our most neglected commercial areas and Mirisch's early focus on the challenges were on target.

Many of the suggestions for improvements will need careful tweaking, always balancing concerns about traffic with business needs.

As for recreating a more viable restaurant row on La Cienega, there are some realities that have to be accepted. The "Row" was never just Beverly Hills, the many top dining options on the street included sections that were mostly in Los Angeles. What also helped make it successful was the surrounding art community, with a very special Monday evening art walk and open galleries.

Today, we have two new restaurant "rows" in our business district, on North Canon and South Beverly. Although I really enjoy our historic Lawry's on La Cienega, still one of the finest dining options anywhere, I hardly ever see anyone from our community eating there.

What was clearly worth exploring were food stores, farmer's market (how about using Horace Mann—a market on the Fairfax High School grounds, is very successful) and a better mix of retailers. As for the food store, maybe the city can approach Gelson's for a smaller version of their chain at the former Blockbuster site on Robertson.

To make this really happen, the city will have to work with the property owners and assure them of a long-term commitment to facilitating investment oriented improvements. That's how Rodeo Drive was created, with the leadership of Fred Hayman and the Mahboubi family, among many others.

One idea that was termed out of the box might also be called out of the ballpark—inviting a minor league farm team to make La Cienega its home. The traffic generation in this area simply would be too much to make this a practical scheme.

Another reality check: Limiting medical uses may not be realistic. First, the whole eastern section of our city is heavily medical, and without that use the east side might well be a really blighted part of the city.

We need to remember that the original medical limitation ordinance was intended for application to our business triangle, not peripheral zones. The intent was to encourage more retailing, and it worked. Also, there have been profound changes in the kinds of medical practices we now have, and no longer can we assume that people who visit doctor's offices will not also be shoppers and diners, in fact we know that is not valid. Improvements in east side retailing and dining will have a built-in constituency—the people who work in or visit medical facilities.

The council Tuesday also took aim at creating a skating rink for the holidays in Beverly Gardens, and this has met with considerable support. But there are problems.

Forgive me, but here this becomes somewhat personal. When I was chair of the Recreation and Parks Commission nearly 20 years ago, we faced a serious challenge from some residents about the continuing use of Beverly Gardens Park for the semi-annual Affaire in the Garden art show. It required some staff outreach to neighbors, mobilizing broad community support for the program and our assurances, including my pledge, that this would be the only time the park would not remain as a passive venue.

With the skating rink planned between Crescent and Beverly Drives, for nearly two months, the impact on the neighborhood should have been vetted first before council gave its approval.

One councilmember said they were under a deadline, explaining why this did not first go to the Recreation and Parks Commission for study. Also, what is not clear is why we could not continue to use the civic center boat court.

Before final approval, parking and traffic effects needed to be carefully studied, neighbors consulted and impact in the area churches weighed too.

Of course, this would be a fine activity, clearly helpful to area retailers, but let's step back and evaluate all the possible impacts and, yes, help me keep my word.

Nice note from school board vice president Jake Manaster confirming that he would not be a candidate for re-election to the board, but denying that he might not consider a run for city council in some future election, just not for this election.

Rudy Cole served for eight years as a member and chair of the city's Recreation & Parks Commission. He was also President of the Greystone Foundation and served on three other city committees. Rudy can be reached at: Rudy@bhweekly.com.

Act during its approval process of the Westside Subway Extension.

The City of Beverly Hills hired two consulting firms to perform peer reviews of Metro's geotechnical reports. Consultant Exponent Inc. concluded Metro's studies did not provide enough information for Metro to make a final decision on the location for the subway station in Century City.

In the two lawsuits filed by the City and BHUSD, both entities complain Metro did not address peer-review reports contracted by the City or Leighton Consulting's work in the final environmental impact report.

Although Leighton Consulting's work is referenced in the two lawsuits, Manaster said he did not believe BHUSD's lawsuit would be affected by extending the investigation.

"I don't think it has any bearing on the lawsuit at all," Manaster said. "My understanding about all the work, candidly, that we have done on the campus is to clear the campus so that it can be built out, to refute a supposition or inference that the MTA's experts made because that's our duty to make sure that we get it right. They don't have any obligation to get it right for the school district. Their obligation is to get it right for the transportation system."

Manaster said the school district would have had to conduct geological testing at the campus regardless of the release of Metro's reports in order to proceed with Measure E projects.

"We would have had to do all of this anyway," Manaster said. "I don't know to what detail but we certainly wanted the answer, which is can we build here, should we build here, will we build here?"

CGS must sign off on seismic reports before school districts can proceed with new construction. Treiman said the level of seismic testing required at school campuses depends on the geologic environment.

"Where prior information in the geologic literature indicates the possibility of faulting, it's an issue that would have to be looked at more closely," Treiman said.

CGS Senior Engineering Geologist Jennifer Thornburg said even before Metro's reports were released, there was enough existing information that would have prompted CGS to question whether or not an active fault exists under Beverly High.

Treiman said in geology, "hardly anything is ever absolutely definitive," but he said he believes the consultants should be able to answer CGS's questions.

The CGS letter stated because the Leighton Consulting report only addresses fault-rupture hazards, other potential seismic hazards need to be addressed before plans for new construction on the Beverly High campus can move forward.

"Any school construction project should look at all types of geologic hazards, everything from expansive soils to seismic shaking hazard," Thornburg said. "In particular, at a site like this, probably shaking hazard is the other prime question that would have to be addressed. The building code requires specific ground-shaking analysis to be done. We will review that before the building is finished through its design process as well."

According to Thornburg, new construction on a school campus cannot take place within 50 feet of an active fault, but there are no legal constraints regarding existing buildings that are located within 50 feet of an active fault.

"School districts will have to weigh the risks themselves and decide whether there's a problem or what level of hazard that appears to be, but there's no legal requirement to do anything about an existing building," Thornburg said.

Thornburg said minor renovations can be done to existing buildings near active faults, but proposed renovations estimated at 50 percent or more of the existing building's value would be treated as new construction, and not permitted.

Pepp, Petersen Automotive Museum head, retires

Buddy Pepp

Two years ago, Beverly Hills resident Buddy Pepp's retirement from a 41-year career in manufacturing was interrupted when he was asked to take on the role of executive director at the Petersen Automotive Museum.

Earlier this week, Pepp announced his second retirement, effective later this month.

"I got recruited to take this job, which I was thrilled about. It's just been a terrific run," Pepp said Monday by phone. "I've really enjoyed it, but with three daughters, six grandchildren, a car collection and the

Big Band of Barristers prevails at Battle of the Lawyer Bands

Beverly Hills resident and conductor Gary Greene's Big Band of Barristers took first place in the American Bar Association's "Battle of the Lawyer Bands" on Aug. 4 at the Chicago Art Institute.

The Los Angeles-based band competed with four Conductor Gary S. Greene lawyer bands from Orlando, Detroit and Chicago that were chosen nation-wide as finalists in the competition. The Barristers performed in the historic Stock Exchange Room at the Art Institute.

Greene, a long-time Beverly Hills resident, organized the Big Band of Barristers in December of 2011. The 18-member band is composed of lawyers, California Appellate Presiding Justice Arthur Gilbert on the piano, a law student and some legal staff. The Barristers perform music from the golden era of the big bands and volunteer concerts raising money for those who cannot afford legal services. Greene organized the band as an adjunct to the Los Angeles Lawyers Philharmonic and Legal Voices that he founded and conducts.

desire to spend more time with family, it's a decision I had to make."

When Pepp started at the museum, he said among other goals, he aimed to make the museum relevant not only to visitors from the United States, but also from around the world. Pepp said museum staff has noticed an increase in international visitors, and approximately 20 percent of the museum's guests come from outside the United States.

"We've been able to make huge strides to improve many, many of the areas including the museum store, the [museum's] appearance, the displays of the vehicles, the donations of the vehicles, the storage of the vehicles," Pepp said. "All of those areas, in my opinion have been greatly enhanced."

Revenue is also up. In 16 of the last 18 months, Pepp said revenue has increased month over month from the previous year.

HERE'S THE PLAN

The Weekly's exclusive interview with Planning Commission Chair Craig Corman By Melanie Anderson

You're about a third of the way into your term as chair. What have you found to be the challenges of leading the commission so far?

The commission is a fairly cohesive group at this point. Everybody works together and cooperates with one another. We're all cordial to each other. We're on good terms, so it has been pretty easy. Staff has done good work on the staff reports on a number of the items. So I haven't found it very difficult at all.

You have significant projects come before you. Aren't those challenging to consider?

We're always looking to shape development so that it's good for the city and good for the developers but maintains the residents' quality of life. One of the aspects should be respecting the City's culture and history. We're always trying to achieve the balance between quality development that's economically viable but also benefits the residential community. That would be the biggest challenge that the commission faces. In general, we spend a great deal of our time trying to achieve that balance.

Tell us how that's done.

I think it depends on the project and where it's located. But there are always certain things we're looking out for. We're looking at minimizing traffic impacts; we're looking at minimizing parking impacts. We're always looking to try to keep projects as small as possible and within the general plan specifications.

Can you give an example?

Lexus was a big project. The original project [proposal] had I think all the service bays on upper floors that would have openings so that the noise would be able to travel throughout the residential area. It also had one level of underground parking to house stock and cars in for service. After working with the applicant, they decided to have two levels of underground development and to put the primary noise-generating service bays underground. They're muffled greatly from the rest of the neighborhood. The height was reduced. I think the circulation patterns both within the facility and within the neighborhood were greatly improved. We imposed a lot of conditions that will minimize impacts to the neighbors immediately south on Maple where there was not a CUP [conditional use permit] in place for the existing Lexus facility and now there will be. We're able to impose conditions that were not previously imposed on that business with respect to [items including] employee parking, valet parking, [and] loading and unloading parts and cars.

Tell us about the commission's approach to developing the overlay zone recommendation for the Gateway Project near Wilshire and Santa Monica boulevards.

The [three] applicants applied to have their properties rezoned for straight C-3 commercial and the Planning Commission decided that was going to be too impactful both in terms of traffic and parking and the size of the buildings that would result. Then the proposal was to create an overlay zone that would allow the city to carefully craft a building specification just for those properties. Before we went forward with that, we thought it was a good idea to get the council's input so we asked for and we obtained a liaison committee meeting between Mayor Willie Brien, Councilmember Lili Bosse, and at that time, [then-Chair] Dan Yukelson. The councilmembers gave us direction on the types of things they wanted to see from development on these sites. The Planning Commission took those parameters and crafted an overlay zone using development standards and objectives that were designed to allow the developers to achieve the public benefit and other goals, while also minimizing the impacts of the area.

How do you think you did?

Given the parameters of the development we were given in the liaison committee meeting, I think we did a pretty good job. In particular, we came up with a fairly creative way of structuring a development so that if only the T-1 [transportation] lots were developed, it would be a certain size building, but if the C-3 [commercial] properties fronting Little Santa Monica were involved in the development, then there would be a different size building. It's a two-tiered approach to the overlay zone, keeping in mind that getting the C-3 properties on Little Santa Monica incorporated into any development in that area would help us achieve more of the goals and public benefits that the liaison committee came up with.

Did it surprise you that the City Council did not approve the overlay zone as recommended by your commission?

No, I think it's a process. I think the applicants recognize it's a process. But we had the input of two councilmembers through the liaison committee; we knew we didn't have five. These properties have been somewhat controversial in the past. I think it was anticipated all five councilmembers would have differing views.

I think that it's very possible that in the next liaison committee meeting [with Brien, Bosse, Vice Chair Brian Rosenstein and myself], we'll get new direction on perhaps reducing the number of public benefits and goals that we're trying to achieve, which would also allow us to reduce the size of the development on the property while still making the development economically viable.

Interestingly, the two-tiered approach I described earlier seemed to be something that all five members of the city council were interested in exploring. No one had any real criticism of that general approach. I think what they were really talking about was how big should the development be, how much green space should it have, what types of businesses do we really want to see on those parcels, how much increase in traffic are we really willing to allow, and we needed to make sure that we're protecting the residential neighborhoods from any negative impacts with respect to traffic and parking.

Do you think everyone is on the same page in terms of wanting to improve that area?

I do. I think there is a majority on the council that believes it would be beneficial to develop those properties in some way to make that area of the city better than it is now. Where the rubber meets the road is what will that development look like?

Commissioner Nan Cole recently resigned. Tell us the process for finding a replacement.

[The process for finding a replacement is] up to the City Council. I think they probably want to put somebody on as soon as they can, only because right now we have four people, so you can have a 2-2 split as opposed to a 3-2 majority on any vote.

Did this come as a surprise?

Yes. I knew she had sold her house. I knew she had moved at least temporarily outside of Beverly Hills, but when I [previously] had a discussion with Nan, I thought she indicated they might be moving back but they hadn't decided what they wanted to do. I assumed they were looking for something in Beverly Hills to move back to. That's why I said it's a surprise.

How is this going to affect the dynamic of the commission?

I hope not at all. I hope whoever is appointed works with everyone else on the commission equally well.

You were an opponent of the Montage project in 2005. Would you say you approach development issues from a slow-growth perspective?

I wouldn't say slow growth because that suggests that it's a numerical issue. That really wasn't why I opposed the Montage project. I think every project needs to be a quality project that makes sense to the City. With the Montage, my primary concern was I didn't think the financial arrangements that the City had made with the developer made a lot of sense and I think events since the Montage was built have somewhat validated my concerns. For example, when you look at the original pro forma for the money that would be coming to the city from the development, there was an assumption the city would be making a lot of money from parking operations. My point was we have free parking up the street more centrally located in the business triangle, why is anybody going to park at the Montage when they can park for free up the street? In fact that's exactly what happened. The revenues that were anticipated to flow from parking at the Montage have not materialized.

Initially what happened was after the Montage was approved, the City Council at that time tried to make [City parking structures] a pay-as-you go parking operation. There was obviously tremendous residential opposition to that as there should have been. The City Council backed off on that. Once two-hour parking was maintained up the street, it had to be extended to the Montage. There's also the fact that at one point the City was going to participate financially in the sale of the condominiums on the top two floors of the Montage. Then the City revised that deal to where we don't participate and most of the condominiums have been sold at very large prices. Keep in mind that in the Montage development, we contributed three parcels of surface parking to development and we contributed a substantial amount of cash, around $30 million. Plus the top two floors where the condominiums are could be considered a land-use subsidy because they weren't entitled [by right] to those top two floors. Ultimately, they're making money off those top two floors through sales.

-- Craig Corman

The bottom line is I opposed it because it was not a very good deal for the city and I think we could have done better. I have no problem with the Montage hotel itself. It's a nice hotel. The Athens Group develops quality hotels. They drove a very good bargain for themselves. With that backdrop I wouldn't say I'm slow-growth but I do think projects need to be good for the city and I think the Montage, as good as it is, could have been financially better for the city.

Tell us about your goals for the commission during the remainder of your term.

One of the things that we want to do and the City Council has budgeted for us to do this year is take a look at the R-1 [single-family home] development standards in the City. It's going to be a process and I think [it will also involve the Design Review Commission]. We have to figure out what the outreach is going to be, but there will be an outreach program [involving residents].

What's the motivation for looking at this?

Well, we've seen I think a steady increase in the size of houses being built in Beverly Hills. In particular when you factor in the basements being built, those basements aren't being counted in FAR [(floor area ratio) even if they have bedrooms in them]. You're seeing houses that have greater density than I think anyone anticipated with the existing R-1 standards. We're not talking about making huge changes to the standards, but perhaps having basement square footage count at some discounted level. We'll take another look at off-street parking spaces. [Years ago] when a large house was a five- or six-bedroom house, four off-street parking spaces made a lot of sense, but in today's world where families may have five or six cars, and they're looking to build houses with 10 bedrooms, only four off-street parking spaces becomes problematic. Then there's the issue where, do we want to have 10 bedrooms in a house? At some point R-1 ceases [to be] R-1; it becomes R-2, R-3 or R-4, at least when it comes to density levels.

I don't know if this is going to be controversial. Years ago, as I understand it, there was a look at adjusting the R-1 standards at least in the central district and there was a lot of residential opposition. As a result, the standards weren't modified but the DRC was formed thinking the city would tackle the problem of overly large houses that way, but I think that was also before we started seeing so many houses being built with maximum FARs aboveground and full basements underground with bedrooms in them.

How did you get involved with the Planning Commission?

After my experience with the Montage, I thought it was worth pursuing. An opening came up and I applied. [I wanted to] try to get better development for the city. I grew up in the city and we live here now. I just want to see the city flourish in a positive way.

Your parents also grew up here. Tell us about that.

My mother went to Hawthorne and graduated from Beverly High. My dad graduated from Beverly High but he moved here later when he was 13 or 14. I went to Hawthorne and Beverly High.

I've always viewed [Beverly Hills] as anyone else would view their hometown. It's the place where I grew up, it's the place I'm familiar with, I know the people, I know a lot of the history of the city. It's home to me, and it's obviously in the middle of a big city, but in some ways it's a small town. When I talk to people and they ask where I am from, they look at you like it's some place special, and it is, but the way I view it is the way they view their hometowns, too.

Tell us about your family.

My wife Karen and I have been married for 22 years next month. She's an attorney. Our son Kyle just turned 15 and he's going into 10th grade this fall. We have a daughter Paige who is [almost] 11 and she's going into fifth grade in the fall.

[Our family is into] baseball and golf. I managed or coached four of Kyle's [Little League teams] and I've managed two of Paige's softball teams. I've played golf recreationally for close to 25 years. I played golf in high school, but then I stopped playing for a while. I picked it up again just after law school.

When your term as chair concludes, what do you hope to have achieved?

[I think] making some adjustments to the R-1 standards would be a big thing for the city just as I think the Trousdale view [restoration] ordinance was a big thing for the city. I think it would be good if we could get some more concrete direction for the Gateway parcels. It may not be that we come up with something final between now and next March. This is a process but [I would like to] take more concrete steps.

I can say being on the commission is interesting. We see a lot of projects that have an impact on the city and I think that we've made an effort to make sure those projects are always beneficial to the city. That's rewarding to shape projects so that they're better projects for the city. That's why I got involved.

"We've had double-digit [percentage] increases for the last two years in store revenue, special events revenue, parking revenue, cash donations, admissions, membership, and website visitors," Pepp said.

Pepp said he and his wife, Design Review Commission Chair Arline Pepp, look forward to spending more time with their children and grandchildren, all of whom live in Northern California.

The question remains if this time for Pepp, retirement will stick.

"Unknown. But I certainly don't want to go back to 60- and 70-hour weeks. That's for sure," Pepp said.

The Petersen Automotive Museum has announced Terry L. Karges as Pepp's successor. Karges is a Southern California native and has worked in marketing management at Disneyland and SeaWorld, but he is currently Vice President of Sales and Marketing for Michigan-based OEM supplier Venchurs Inc.

Pepp said his advice to Karges is to "pay close attention to the recommendations of the staff because their knowledge, instincts and professionalism is nothing short of sensational."

NOTICE TO POTENTIAL BIDDERS If you are considering bidding on this property lien, you should understand that there are risks involved in bidding at a trustee auction. You will be bidding on a lien, not on a property itself. Placing the highest bid at a trustee auction does not automatically entitle you to free and clear ownership of the property. You should also be aware that the lien being auctioned off may be a junior lien. If you are the highest bidder at the auction, you are or may be responsible for paying off all liens senior to the lien being auctioned off, before you can receive clear title to the property. You are encouraged to investigate the existence, priority, and size of outstanding liens that may exist on this property by contacting the county recorder's office or a title insurance company, either of which may charge you a fee for this information. If you consult either of these resources, you should be aware that the lender may hold more than one mortgage or deed of trust on the property. NOTICE TO PROPERTY OWNER The sale date shown on this notice of sale may be postponed one or more times by the mortgagee, beneficiary, trustee, or a court, pursuant to Section 2924g of the California Civil Code. The law requires that information about trustee sale postponements be made available to you and to the public, as a courtesy to those not present at the sale. If you wish to learn whether your sale date has been postponed, and, if applicable, the rescheduled time and date for the sale of this property, you may call 1-800-281-8219 or visit this Internet Web site www.recontrustco.com, using the file number assigned to this case TS No. 12-0027988.
