Neighbors voice numerous concerns about Lexus Project's potential impacts

Dozens of residents assembled in the City Hall Municipal Gallery Monday night to ask questions and voice concerns about the proposed rebuilding of the Jim Falk Lexus dealership at 9230 Wilshire Boulevard, known as the Lexus Project.

The proposed project is a 45-foot-tall dealership with four levels above ground and two subterranean levels with 70 service bays. The dealership would have approximately 29,000 square feet of showroom and office space on the first and second levels, 82,000 square feet of vehicle parking and circulation areas within all four levels, and approximately 57,000 square feet of subterranean vehicle service areas.

Concerns included the scale of the project, traffic generated by a larger dealership and impacts of a proposed traffic light at Wilshire Boulevard and South Maple Drive, noise, fumes, hazardous materials at the site, and how the City would enforce the approximately 100 conditions that were imposed with the conditional use permit (CUP).

The community meeting took place one week before the City Council will hear an appeal of the CUP on Dec. 19. The City Council will also consider certification of the final environmental impact report, the relocation of an alley, a loading zone on Wilshire Boulevard, and a zone text amendment allowing certain parking and service areas to be excluded from total floor area.

The Planning Commission voted Oct. 27 to recommend the project to the City Council, but former Mayor and attorney Steve Webb filed an appeal of the CUP on behalf of the owners of 131 South Maple Drive and 9250 Wilshire Boulevard, an apartment building south of the project and a commercial office building adjacent to the project, respectively. The 12-page appeal letter cited concerns about the project's magnitude and its location adjacent to a residential area, among other issues. Representatives of both properties attended the Monday night meeting.

"We have brought our opposition to the project since Day 1," said Hamid Shooheed of 131 South Maple Drive. "The biggest problem is we're trying to fit an industrial use into a residential area."

Shooheed said he was concerned that if the project is approved, the conditions will be ignored. Planning Commissioner Noah Furie, who facilitated the meeting with Commission Chair Dan Yukelson and City staff members, was candid in his response.

"Human nature is some people are going to break the law," Furie said. "I think it's incumbent upon Lexus, if they want to stay in business, to enforce the rules with their customers. I am confident that our city council is going to take this very, very seriously."

Furie and Yukelson pointed out the City can impose additional conditions or even revoke the CUP, which would cease operation of the dealership. The dealership currently operates without a CUP, because it was not required when the original project was approved.

"I understand the Planning Commission has tried to balance this for the benefit of not only residents but also of the commercial property owner," said Raymond Levy, owner of 9250 Wilshire Boulevard. "I happen to be a commercial property owner, too. With what is proposed to go into the ground here is going to be a huge detriment to us."

Levy said existing traffic conditions affect access to his office building on Rexford Drive, and he was concerned about potential increased traffic and construction impacts generated by the project.

Hamid Gabbay, architect of Nessah Synagogue, stated he was concerned about how a larger dealership might impact the synagogue's operations. Gabbay asked why there was an exit proposed via the alley, if the City is also installing a barrier to restrict turns in and out of the dealership on Wilshire Boulevard.

Yukelson said alley access would be limited to vehicles exiting to Wilshire for test drives. Furie said Gabbay's comments at previous

FAC proposes radical demolition of Hawthorne campus

The BHUSD Facilities Advisory Committee (FAC) met Dec. 8 to discuss construction plans for Hawthorne that would involve significant demolition of the existing campus.

Though BHUSD provided the Weekly with slides depicting three concepts under consideration—Options 3, 4 and 5—Chief Facilities Official Nelson Cayabyab declined to confirm which buildings would remain or which would be demolished based on the three options. Cayabyab said he was uncomfortable presenting the plans to the Weekly before the Board of Education studies the options. All three options have been presented at FAC meetings, which are open to the public.

When asked if part of the façade on Rexford Drive and the iconic tower would be the only buildings preserved under the options, Cayabyab said, “It could very well be. They are preliminary plans and things could change. All I’m going to tell you at this point is we are committed to doing our homework for Options 3, 4 and 5, and it is going to be the decision of the Board what remains and what is torn down.”

Former Mayor Ed Brown, who is chair of the FAC, said no plans have been approved, but Option 5 is currently in the lead.

“I like [the plans] but I want to have more input because I think this is a little bit more difficult than the Horace Mann project because it was laid out differently,” Brown said. “Horace Mann had more depth and it wasn’t just a long school. I think also the teachers have to understand where we’re going with this and understand the idea of the 21st century initiative of education.”

The plans describe various wings of the campus as “learning communities” and “neighborhoods.”

“The traditional [design] is classrooms are all individual and hallways connect classrooms together,” Cayabyab said. “This community learning concept is you have groups of classrooms in the same discipline and [they] also open up into a community learning space that can be shared by teachers.”

As plans move forward, Councilmember John Mirisch said he is concerned the district should be doing more to try to preserve the historically significant elements of Hawthorne.

“Hawthorne is almost as old as the City itself and it in fact pre-dates the school district,” said Mirisch, who attended Hawthorne as a student.

Mirisch suggested the school district should hire a consultant to determine which parts of the campus are historically significant, before final plans are made.

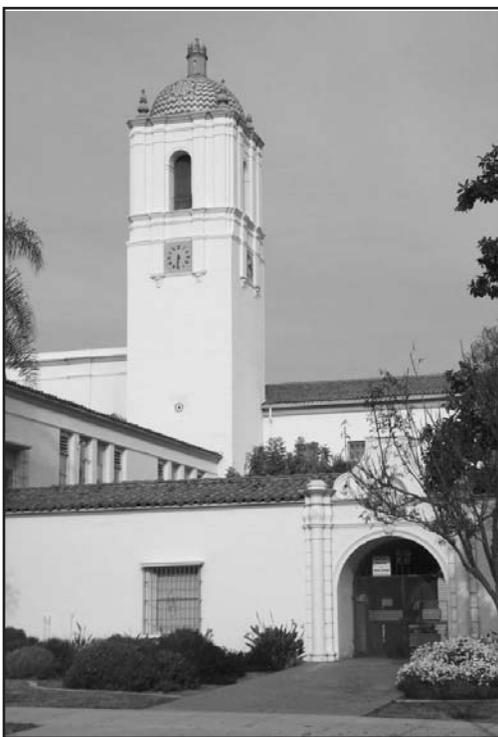

“I think that’s a reasonable start to have a consultant that is going to be able to look and say what really is historically significant and how it can be incorporated into an upgrade of the entire facility,” Mirisch said. “The problem is, as we’ve seen, when you’ve got architects and construction companies that get paid on a basis of how much and how quickly they build, they’re going to have other priorities. There seem to have been times in the past when we may have been a little bit quick to pull the trigger and we’ve seen what happens when we are not deliberate and don’t consider all the factors.”

Though it appears each of the three options would preserve part of the building’s façade on Rexford and the iconic tower, many other buildings would be subject to demolition.

“That very well may turn out to be enough [to preserve],” Mirisch said. “We just don’t have the expert information one way or the other.”

Brown said it is likely Hawthorne’s auditorium balcony will be removed. Brown explained in general, the slope on which Hawthorne is built makes it difficult for the campus to comply with ADA. Having an auditorium that is only one level would be simpler and more efficient, Brown said.

When asked about plans for the auditorium, which is already the smallest of the K-8 schools and would be made even smaller without the balcony, Cayabyab said, “That’s specific; that we haven’t really determined yet. That comes under the planning phase. [This] is just conceptual.”

Hawthorne, then called Beverly Hills Grammar School, opened in fall 1914, about 20 years before the BHUSD was unified in 1935. According to a presentation by BHUSD consultant BP & Associates, Inc., which recently conducted mechanical, electrical, plumbing, and civil engineering surveys of the campus, the school’s auditorium was completed in 1921, and several more structures were added between 1922 and 1928. The main building was demolished in 1929 and replaced. The North Wing and a new Kindergarten building were completed in 1953, and the 140-141 building was completed in 1961.

Modernization followed in the late 1960s and early 1970s, which included constructing the library wing and a two-story primary learning center and required demolition of the Kindergarten building. Most recently, a “full modernization” took place in 2000 that involved the infrastructure upgrade of the entire campus where electrical, plumbing and HVAC systems were replaced and upgraded.

Brown said the FAC has discussed retaining the important historic elements of the campus, but the committee does not want to lose flexibility in updating the campus.

“We took under consideration John Mirisch’s suggestion about retaining historical parts of the project,” Brown said. “No decision was made on that.”

Cayabyab said criteria for hiring the architect included having a historical designer on staff.

Brown said some buildings would likely be demolished because of inefficiencies and poor planning.

“One of the areas is the northern area where the fields are; you have to walk downstairs to go to the bathroom,” Brown said. “It was just added on and added on. You want a spine that goes through the whole school so that it doesn’t curve and turn. There are so many things [that can be done] to make [the school] more effective and efficient.”

Mirisch said he was less concerned about the possibility of leveling the buildings from the 1960s and 1970s, but he said he hoped the district would do the right thing when it comes to Hawthorne’s 1920s-era buildings.

“Schools teach history,” Mirisch said. “I hope that they honor and respect the history of the building that they’re actually in. I don’t think the goals of upgrading school facilities and goals of historic preservation are mutually exclusive. In fact, it’s done all the time and that’s what they should be looking to do.”

Los Angeles Conservancy Director of Advocacy Adrian Scott Fine would not comment on Hawthorne’s individual merits because he had not yet researched it, but he said it is not uncommon for school districts to propose demolition in the name of meeting educational and technological goals.

When asked if school buildings are subject to the California Environmental Quality Act (CEQA), Fine responded, “We believe they are.” Under CEQA, environmental impact reports are required for projects associated with buildings that have been identified as historic in order to determine impacts to historic resources and evaluate alternatives to mitigate those impacts.

“In part it gets at this issue, are there ways to achieve the goals of the school district that don’t necessarily have to equate with demolition?” Fine said. “What’s good with the EIR process is it at least forces that conversation to take place to look at alternatives.”

The Conservancy is currently following a case at Leuzinger High in Lawndale in the Centinela Valley Union School District, where several campus structures have already been demolished to construct new buildings funded by a bond. The Conservancy believes the campus is historically significant and should be subject to CEQA. Local advocacy group Friends and Alumni of Leuzinger High School has filed a lawsuit to force an EIR and halt additional demolition.

Fine said if a school building is considered historic, the district might not have to go through the EIR process if it looks at ways to renovate the building and meet preservation standards from the beginning of the planning process.

Fine added, “There usually is an opportunity for a win-win in terms of keeping a building as a historic resource and still meeting the needs of a school in 2012 or beyond. It doesn’t have to be an either/or situation.”

Brown said the next step would be for the FAC to meet with Hawthorne site representatives to come up with a recommendation to make to the Board of Education. The Board will review and refine plans at a study session slated for Jan. 24, and eventually vote on plans at a formal meeting.

Brett Hobza of DLR Group WWCOT referred the Weekly’s phone call seeking comment to Julio Palacio in the BHUSD facilities department. Palacio referred the Weekly to Cayabyab.

meetings prompted the commission to abandon plans to vacate the alley, and instead relocate it immediately south of the proposed building.

“I honestly was asking to keep it where it was,” Gabbay said.

South Maple Drive resident Anitra Eskovitz questioned why notice of the project was not extended to her block, which she believes would also be affected. Associate Planner Ryan Gohlich explained notice was published in two local newspapers and mailed within a 300-foot radius of the project, in compliance with code. When the appeal hearing date was set on Nov. 15, a number of residents outside the 300-foot radius said they believed they should have been notified. As a result, the City scheduled the community meeting and extended notice about the Dec. 19 appeal hearing.

“I was very pleased to see that many people turn out and very pleased that people felt comfortable to voice their opinions and have an open dialogue with us,” Yukelson said Tuesday. “I’m sorry some people weren’t aware of the 10 meetings we had previously [during which] they had this opportunity to turn out and speak to us. I feel like we’ve done our due diligence on the project and we came to the right conclusion on it. We put the right belts and suspenders on it to make sure it operates much better in the neighborhood.”

Planning Commission crafts ordinance to protect City’s historic properties

The Planning Commission reviewed the first draft of the City’s proposed historic preservation ordinance, which would establish a process through which the City would implement goals and policies for historic preservation, on Dec. 8.

“One of the things that is being contemplated is to create a local register of properties that might be subject to historic preservation and will enable the City to stop or at least temporarily prevent property owners from demolishing a historic resource in the City while it has a chance to review the project,” Planning Commission Chair Dan Yukelson said.

Yukelson said designated historic properties would be eligible for certain benefits that could include property tax reductions under the Mills Act in exchange for maintaining a historic property, or alternative building and maintenance requirements under the California State Historical Building Code, Yukelson said.

The draft historic preservation program would establish a five-member Cultural Heritage Commission to oversee the program.

“[The Cultural Heritage Commission] is going to help develop program incentives, create a local register and provide recommendations to the City Council about properties that should be designated as [historic] under this ordinance,” Yukelson said.

When asked if school buildings could be subject to the ordinance, Yukelson said, “I don’t think so because those aren’t City properties. They’re owned by another government entity, which is the school district.”

Yukelson said the Cultural Heritage Commission would also review and make recommendations on applications for the Mills Act program. The City Council recently approved a two-year Mills Act pilot program, which offers property tax incentives to owners of historically significant properties in Beverly Hills who rehabilitate and maintain the properties.

“Being listed on the register isn’t the end all,” Yukelson said. “If somebody wanted to do some major renovations or even demolish the property, there is still the ability to do so. It just has to go through a [more] extensive review process.”

Yukelson pointed out it is likely only a small number of properties in Beverly Hills would be subject to the ordinance.

“As we saw with the Neutra house recently, we almost lost a property that really illustrates some of the rich history we have in the City of Beverly Hills,” Yukelson said. “I think there are a number of properties that are very similar to the Neutra house that absolutely need to be preserved.”

The Planning Commission will next review the ordinance on Dec. 19.

City, police contract agreement requires employee pension contribution; establishes two-tier retirement program

The City announced last week that the City and Beverly Hills Police Officers Association have reached a tentative agreement for a five-year employment contract after months of negotiations. The contract will be retroactive, as the last contract expired on Oct. 7, 2011.

Over the life of the contract, the total increase in compensation is 1 percent. The tentative agreement also provides for a two-tier retirement program, meaning new hires receive different benefits than those of existing employees.

Under the agreement, police officers will begin paying part of the employee contribution to their pensions on Jan. 1, 2014 and pension contributions will reach 4 percent by the end of the five-year contract. Currently, the City pays both the employee and employer share of pension contributions.

Beginning Jan. 1, 2012, employees will have a “cafeteria plan” for benefits. City Manager Jeff Kolin told the Weekly in July that the plan gives employees choices as to the level of health care coverage they receive in the form of medical, dental and optical insurance. Employees are eligible to receive cash if they opt out of receiving one, two or all three benefits. According to a press release, employees will pay the additional amount if a

NOTICE OF PUBLIC HEARING

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that the Planning Commission of the City of Beverly Hills, at a special meeting to be held on Monday, December 19, 2011, at 1:30 p.m. or as soon thereafter as the item may be heard, in Room 280-A of the City Hall, 455 N. Rexford Drive, Beverly Hills, CA 90210, will hold a public hearing to consider:

A RESOLUTION OF THE PLANNING COMMISSION OF THE CITY OF BEVERLY HILLS RECOMMENDING CITY COUNCIL ADOPTION OF AN ORDINANCE ESTABLISHING A CULTURAL HERITAGE COMMISSION AND AMENDING THE MUNICIPAL CODE PROVISIONS REGARDING HISTORIC PRESERVATION.

The proposed Ordinance would replace existing Article 32 (“Preservation of Landmarks”) with a new, more expansive Article 32 (“Historic Preservation”). The proposed Ordinance provides greater protection for historically significant properties by establishing a historic preservation program for the City. The Ordinance establishes a Cultural Heritage Commission and creates procedures and criteria for landmark and historic district designation. The Ordinance also incorporates preservation incentives and creates penalties for unauthorized demolition or alteration of historic resources.

This Project has been assessed in accordance with the authority and criteria contained in the California Environmental Quality Act (CEQA), the State CEQA Guidelines, and the environmental regulations of the City. The City has determined that the Project will not have a significant environmental impact and is exempt from CEQA pursuant to Section 15061(b)(3) of Title 14 of the California Code of Regulations. In addition, City Staff has determined that the project is categorically exempt from environmental review as a project that meets the criteria of the Class 31 exemption (“Historical Resource Restoration/ Rehabilitation”).

All interested persons are invited to attend and speak on this matter. Written comments may be submitted, c/o Planning Services, 455 N. Rexford Drive, 1st Floor, Beverly Hills, CA 90210 and should be received prior to 5:00 p.m. on December 14, 2011 to be included with the Planning Commission’s agenda packet. Written materials may be submitted during the public hearing.

Please note that if you challenge the City’s action in court, you may be limited to raising only those issues you or someone else raised at a public hearing or in written correspondence delivered to the City, either at or prior to the end of the public comment period.

If there are any questions regarding this notice, please contact Peter Noonan, AICP CEP, Associate Planner, Community Development Department, Planning, at 310.285.1127 or pnoonan@beverlyhills.org. medical plan exceeds a preset limit.

Under the two-tier retirement program, employees hired after July 1, 2012 can retire at age 55 (instead of 50) with a pension based on 3 percent of their salary for each year of service and their pensions will be based on the average of the three highest salary years, rather than the single highest year. Employees hired after March 1, 2012 will have a defined contribution toward a retiree medical health savings account.

The new contract incorporates a number of changes, but not all, that were recommended to the City Council by the Beverly Hills Pension Task Force in a presentation by City Treasurer Eliot Finkel on Aug. 2. Finkel, who said current public safety pensions were unsustainable, made the following recommendations, which were based on the League of California Cities' pension reform proposal:

- Require employees to contribute the 9-percent employee pension obligation, which is currently contributed by the City

- Base pension benefits on base salary
- Set a maximum benefit of 65 percent of salary, instead of 90 percent
- Increase the minimum retirement age from 50 to 55
- Base pension benefits on the average of the final three years' salary, instead of single highest
- Establish a two-tier pension system, with lower benefits for new employees
- Supplement defined benefit cap with defined contribution plan

The BHPOA has ratified the agreement, and the City Council is expected to vote on the contract at an upcoming meeting.

"I'm happy we reached an agreement," Councilmember John Mirisch said. "I think if you asked the police, they're somewhat dissatisfied. I'm somewhat dissatisfied. That might be a sign of a good compromise. What I think is important about this contract is it gets us moving in the right direction to achieve long-term stability and sustainability."

Mirisch identified the employee contribution to the pension of up to 4 percent as a significant move in the right direction, but the share is supposed to be 9 percent, he said.

"The members of the Beverly Hills Police Officers Association are excited that we have reached this tentative agreement with the City," BHPOA President Sgt. Terry Nutall said in a statement. "It has always been our goal to work in partnership with the City in helping them address their long term sustain-

Why all the anger?

Thoughts on making it better

By Rudy Cole

Just maybe it's the season that makes us somewhat philosophical about our lives and the world in which we live, but I often wonder, when I hear some of the very few angry, strident voices of our community, why they seem to forget the wonders of our village.

To hear the acerbic voices of a small minority, we are always about to fall apart. The municipal sky is falling.

We have an amazing city government that makes us one of the best-managed and represented communities anywhere. We are solvent. Our city employees love working here. People who come to city hall are treated with respect and, most important, we have a sense of security found in few places anywhere. Our elected officials must be doing something right.

Criticism is good, even productive, but within some reasonable bounds of fairness, and some showing of respect. Considering some of the more recent examples of abuse of some of our elected officials, it is not surprising that many highly qualified residents run from rather than for city council.

Obviously, most of our residents approve of how this city is managed and represented. Being louder and more hysterical does not mean that the few negative voices really represent anything close to a majority view. The only danger is that the positive people in the city turn away from involvement and even voting. Only then could we really go to the dark side.

We are indeed well governed, by today's and yesterday's leaders, but can we make it even better? I do have some thoughts:

Limit and/or abolish most council ad hoc committees.

It has only been in recent years that councilmembers were appointed by the mayor to act as liaisons with each and every commission. This creates an enormous demand on their time, but, more important, it tends to inhibit the independent decision making process of commissions.

Most commissions are advisory, but not all. Some, such as Planning, have direct decision making authority and their findings become law unless appealed. Most other commissions adopt recommendations that then go to the council automatically. Even Planning Commission findings can be reviewed by the council, if a majority wishes, without appeal from applicants or opponents.

Time demands aside, these liaison, ad hoc committees inevitably have an impact on the independent findings of the commissions. Two councilmembers can express opinions that could clearly inhibit members of commissions and bring to the council recommendations that may not entirely reflect their original views. True, this doesn't happen very often, but it does.

As an example, at a recent meeting, when the council unanimously rejected a recommendation to install traffic signals at Bedford Drive and Sunset Boulevard, some councilmembers expressed surprise that the commission majority views did not take into account the opposition of the council liaison members.

I think the council made the right call, traffic lights at that intersection would have exacerbated residential impacts, but the commission recommendations alone should come to the council, not those of councilmembers who will have their own opportunity to make the final decision.

There are ad hoc and liaison committees that do make good sense, and these include board of education, city-funded programs such as Chamber of Commerce, Conference and Visitor's Bureau, Rodeo Drive Committee and similar groups. This work by committee helps gather information needed to make decisions that are hardly ever assigned to commissions.

Let council alone pick commission members.

Another practice that has evolved and become more complicated is the process of selecting members of city commissions. Prospective commission members file formal applications, are interviewed by a mixed committee of councilmembers and members of the commission, a vote is taken and only one nomination is then considered by the whole council. Seldom are these recommendations not followed by the whole council.

Not too many years back, each councilmember had the informal ability to "suggest" one member for each commission, as vacancies occurred. The argument against this practice was that it encouraged favoritism and was often used as a means of rewarding supporters or friends. On the other hand it did assure that commissions more closely represented political diversity.

West Hollywood has formalized that process; Beverly Hills did it by precedent, not by any adopted rules.

In Culver City, commission applicants are interviewed at public council meetings and then decided by majority vote.

Having commissioners pick their colleagues raises a different kind of problem. Newly appointed members should not owe their selection to fellow commissioners, no matter how independent the new member. Also, the elected councilmembers alone should and can be held accountable for their choices.

Restore the job of ombudsman.

Probably the most misunderstood element of city government is the city manager form of government mandated in general law cities, including ours.

Even well-informed residents are often puzzled when they call a mayor or councilmember asking for some government related help only to discover that these elected officials cannot, legally, "order" it to happen.

All sorts of citizen concerns are received by our elected five. But whether it is a request for cleaning up an alley or installing an extra bedroom, the councilmember, and even the mayor, can only refer the problem to the city manager who alone can process a matter to the right department.

Seems difficult to accept: After all, we elect the council, not the city manager, but when there is a problem or need, the councilmember has no real authority to act. Obviously, the historic reason for city managers was to remove favoritism and possible corruption. But the result is a layer of separation between citizens and their representatives. Almost every other elected official has staff that deal exclusively with constituent needs, whatever they are. Social security check did not arrive? Call your congressman.

For a brief period, Beverly Hills created a special office to handle citizen complaints and council requests for administrative actions. The informal title was "ombudsman" and the position was once filled by the now retired Maria Rychlicki. Maria had previously headed the transportation department, worked in planning and several other agencies, and was totally familiar with city government procedures. Although she, and the office, reported to the city manager, all kinds of citizen concerns came to her desk. At the very least, she was able to refer citizens to the right agency and, quite often, ameliorate misunderstandings.

Keep some commissions at seven members.

It was during Allan Alexander's term as mayor that the number of city commissions nearly doubled, and government process became far more inclusive and open.

Those new commissions included Recreation and Parks and Human Relations, and many others. The intent was to involve more citizens in government and possibly even encourage them to run for city council.

Most commissions, including Planning, and Recreation and Parks, have five members, others such as Fine Art and Human Relations, had seven. Now, the council wants to reduce all the seven-member commissions to five. The argument for standardizing the number is to reduce costs and expedite decision-making.

However, the more commission members, the more opportunities for involvement in city government. Those commissions with seven arguably make findings that are more reflective of our diversity.

The council should reverse this action.

Televise commission meetings.

We have an incredible local television resource facility managed by highly qualified and creative staff members. There is considerable local programming, but there are also many hours filled with C-SPAN feeds.

All council meetings are televised live and replayed. But that was not met with universal approval by all of the members of the council when it was first introduced by then-Mayor Ben Stansbury. Some of his colleagues felt that television cameras would inhibit meetings and that some members "would perform for the camera."

Televising council meetings was probably the most important single tool in making government more open and understandable. Now, it is time to do the same for all commissions. For all kinds of reasons, including costs, newspapers simply cannot assign reporters to each and every commission and still cover council, school board and other news-making events. I doubt if any reporter was in the room when the Fine Art Commission selected the art at Wilshire and Beverly Drive, but many in our community wanted to understand how the choice was made, to cite only one example of public interest.

Most commissions meet monthly, at the very least these could be taped and all aired on pre-announced, regular scheduled days. You just might be amazed at all the good work being done by your friends and neighbors, and how professional and competent the assistance they receive from city staff.

Traffic & Parking Commission to be reduced by two members

In the interest of efficiency, the City Council directed staff at Tuesday's study session to prepare an ordinance to modify the municipal code to reduce the number of Traffic & Parking commissioners from seven to five. The City Council will vote on the ordinance at a future meeting.

Deputy Director of Transportation Aaron Kunz reported to the City Council that the City Council-Commission liaisons—represented by Vice Mayor Willie Brien, Councilmember John Mirisch, Commission Chair Jeff Levine and Vice Chair Julie Steinberg—supported reducing the size of the commission through attrition, but the liaisons agreed a "geographical balance" should be maintained.

Commissioner Howard Fisher will depart the Traffic & Parking Commission for the Planning Commission in January 2012, and Commissioner Ira Friedman will complete his second term in May 2012.

Of the five remaining commissioners, Kunz said one commissioner lives north of Sunset Boulevard, two live between Sunset and Santa Monica boulevards, and two live south of Wilshire.

"We definitely need to make sure we balance the commission with people from geographically diverse parts of town," Mirisch said. "Looking at the makeup of the commission in the future, we should be very, very mindful."

Levine said he believed meetings would run more efficiently with fewer members.

"I think there are still enough people to give a variety of opinions and bring diversity to the commission, especially if we're mindful of where the various commissioners live," Levine said.

The City Council voted in August to reduce three other commissions—Architectural, Fine Art and Human Relations—from seven to five members, through attrition.

Beverly Hills recycles nearly 70 percent of its waste

Public Works Commission Chair Peter Foldvary can attest the City of Beverly Hills recycles.

Following the full commission's tour of the Crown Disposal facilities in Sun Valley on Dec. 8, Foldvary wanted to remind residents that although trash and recycling items are discarded in a single bin, Crown Disposal separates items at its industrial facility.

According to Foldvary, Beverly Hills is diverting 68 percent of its waste from the landfill, which is well above the 50 percent required by the State of California.

"By 2020, the state will require 75 percent diversion, which will be very challenging to achieve, [but] Beverly Hills is nearly there," Foldvary said. "We are doing well."

BHEF launches annual appeal

The Beverly Hills Education Foundation has launched its Annual Appeal, which funds and supports numerous programs and positions that help bring excellence in education to all five Beverly Hills public schools. According to BHEF, the organization's primary fundraising is done through its Annual Appeal.

"We make our fundraising push at the end of the calendar year, after all the PTA's and the PTSA have done theirs," BHEF President Annette Saleh said in a statement. "We are dedicated to raising the funds necessary to sustain the academic excellence BHUSD students and families have come to expect. The Foundation supports our children through the entire K-12 journey."

Last year, BHEF donated close to $1.4 million dollars to the BHUSD to bridge the gap between basic aid revenues and the cost of providing an outstanding quality education. This year's appeal highlights how donors can make a difference in the 2011-2012 school year. BHEF-funded programs include middle school intramural sports, co-curricular enrichment programs, after school playground supervision and additional funding for arts programs at all four K-8 schools. At Beverly High, BHEF funds walk-on coaches for boys/girls teams at all levels, a full-time journalism ROP teacher to assist with publication of the newspaper, additional funding for arts programs, enrichment activities such as Robotics, Model UN, Science Olympiad and Academic Decathlon and a high school registrar. Additionally, BHEF funds will supplement ongoing professional training for teachers in order to maintain their expertise in their subject area as well as underwrite a math initiative, professional development for math teachers with emphasis on the transition between each course in grades 6-12.

"It is critical that we raise a significant amount through this year-end campaign. Our five public schools and our children need us now, more than ever," Saleh said. "We ask you to give now to make a difference now." To donate, visit www.bhef.org.

City's bike committee is "re-creating the wheel" with Beverly Hills bike plan

The Traffic & Parking Commission's Bicycle Ad Hoc Committee continued its study of a potential pilot bicycle lane for Beverly Hills on Nov. 16.

"We call it [a pilot project] because it's never been done before and it's kind of an experiment," Commission Chair Jeff Levine said. "We'll also look at bicycle facilities, intersections, and hopefully bring in the Westside Cities Council of Governments to look at how what we're doing affects what our neighboring cities are doing."

Levine, Commissioners Ira Friedman and Alan Grushcow, and City staff including Deputy Director of Transportation Aaron Kunz serve on the committee that has

ISLAND AMBASSADOR

U.S. Ambassador Nicole Avant discusses The Bahamas, Obama's campaign and Beverly High soccer By Melanie Anderson

So, how does a woman from Beverly Hills end up as U.S. ambassador to The Bahamas?

I served as the finance co-chairwoman for the Barack Obama presidential campaign in Southern California. I had met [Obama] when he was a state senator and was running for U.S. senator. My family has been involved in politics forever. It's a music background, but my father [Clarence Avant] has always been very much involved politically. During the civil rights movement, after and moving forward, he has been advisor to many senators, presidents and governors. I was very fortunate to grow up in a house that was always filled with various types of politicians. There was never a dull moment for a good conversation because there were usually both sides of the table, which was even better. It really gave me a love for government and a respect for our country and the democracy that we have and how important it is for everyone to make their voices heard.

How did your father get started in politics?

He wanted to be at the table when they were making decisions that affected African Americans. [Making] sure that there was an authentic voice at the table was very important to him. I think that's why he got involved. I remember a fundraiser we did at the house—I was very young—it was for mayor of Los Angeles Tom Bradley. It was a big deal because he was the first black mayor of Los Angeles. Moving forward, Ted Kennedy was at the house a lot. He probably made the biggest impact on me and [so did] Senator [Paul] Wellstone. We had met him about a year before he was killed in a plane crash [in 2002]. He's the one that really got me thinking about politics again. Even though I was a businesswoman, he said, "You have to stay involved; young people have to have a voice." I feel very fortunate to have had so much access to so many wonderful thinkers and wonderful people who are committed.

[My father is] very bright and very talented. He's a very good strategist. He's built a reputation for himself that most politicians, whether they're governors, senators, congressmen or mayors, when they start campaigns there's always a phone call. It's great to see that people respect his opinion and they value his opinion. I grew up in that type of world where he said you can't expect your government to do everything. You can't complain about things and not be involved, and not vote. [My parents] made it very clear regardless of what political party you're in, you vote for the best person.

Music celebrities were around and athletes, [but] the politicians for me were the most exciting because they were always coming from Washington or another state. It was always a different feel, and yet a lot of musicians that were always at the house were also politically involved. It was great to see the marriage between the entertainment world and the political world. It's been around for a long time.

Was your father also involved with the Obama campaign?

No. We were all supporting everyone. The difference was the Obama team gave me a position. My parents were very involved in Hillary Clinton's campaign. They've been family friends for about 20 years, but my father supported me while I was working for Obama. [Clinton] ended up being my boss as well at the State Department. I got very lucky to have two great bosses who I look up to very much.

You recently concluded two years of service as an ambassador. How did you divide your time between The Bahamas and Southern California?

I was [in The Bahamas] 90–95 percent of the time. [My husband] Ted [Sarandos] was always on a plane with my stepchildren flying back and forth. I was there most of the time. You have to be. I know The Bahamas sounds like a vacation post, but The Bahamas is a very important posting because it's a law enforcement post. You're 53 miles away from the United States. It's not in the Caribbean [Sea]; The Bahamas is actually in the Atlantic Ocean.

It used to be The Bahamas [was] known for drug transit, but now after 9/11 anything can come through. It's trafficking of persons, trafficking of weapons, or drug trafficking. I was constantly busy working with law enforcement officials there, which was my favorite part of the job. I was working with DEA [Drug Enforcement Administration], Coast Guard, CBP [U.S. Customs and Border Protection] and ICE [U.S. Immigration and Customs Enforcement]. It was a terrific team. That really was the best part of the job. I fell in love with law enforcement; I fell in love with all these agents and really saw the work that they do to protect the homeland. I think people forget The Bahamas really does serve as the third border; it is our backdoor. We think of Mexico and Canada but we forget the other side. The Bahamas is a great partner to the U.S. in helping [to] keep us safe.

Describe a typical day as an ambassador.

It varies on the day. I [would] meet with a "country team" every week, usually every Tuesday, and that was getting all the agencies and agency heads together that would inform me. We would [discuss] concerns, challenges, what was going on in their world and [we had] to make very heavy decisions with them on behalf of our government. Some days were filled with all policy. Some days were filled with policy, public diplomacy and law enforcement; [those were] the three things [on which] we focused.

The easiest way to describe the role of ambassador is I am the personal representative of the president of the United States. It's a heavy load, but some days I was working with the Bahamian government, making sure that we're on the same page as much as we can be. We're lucky because we have a great relationship with them. Anything that we might have had minor disagreements on they would fix very quickly. A lot of it was to Secretary Clinton's credit. She made sure her ambassadors were focusing on real American diplomacy, really being out there and connecting with the people of the countries.

I focused on women's empowerment. I focused on people with disabilities and making people aware they're still human beings and valuable. I [helped connect] American businesses with business owners in The Bahamas. Magic Johnson was great. He came down twice to do business seminars with me. What I wanted to do was bring the world I came from of entertainment, art and media, and your job as an ambassador is to bring the best of America to The Bahamas. If it was about education, I called on Geoffrey Canada, the star of Waiting for Superman and [president and CEO] of the Harlem Children's Zone. Energy companies [from California that] focused on sustainable energy would come to visit. It was really making connections between two countries that were beneficial to both countries.

Tell us about the Bahamian form of government.

It's a [parliamentary] system, but it's a democracy. It's run very similar to ours. They have parliament [but] it doesn't run much differently. Fortunately we focus on the same values and have the same common goals, but The Bahamas [have been] independent only since July 10, 1973, so they're still newly independent. It's still a commonwealth; the queen is the monarch.

When you were sworn in by Secretary of State Hillary Clinton, you remarked, "Beyond geographic proximity, the United States and The Bahamas share a commitment to democratic ideals, the rule of law and strategic interests that span issues of regional security, economic and social progress, energy security and stewardship of the environment." Tell us about the relationship between the United States and The Bahamas.

I think that sums it up. The relationship is excellent. It has been excellent for a long time and we're fortunate to have such a strong partner in the western hemisphere that has the same democratic values and understands the importance of the rule of law. The Bahamians feel very, very close to Americans. It's a tourist destination. [Between 4 and] 5 million Americans visit the Bahamas every year. Americans are really the ones who [Bahamians] see the most.

Tony Sarandos, Sarah Sarandos, Nicole Avant, Ted Sarandos

Was it difficult adjusting to living there?

The biggest adjustment was living in that type of fishbowl world where you have bodyguards every day and the privacy is gone. I thought I could handle it much better than I did in the beginning. I got used to it, [but] it's amazing what you take for granted [like] taking a walk around town or getting in your car to go meet your friends for dinner. I [also] wasn't used to being "on" all the time. Regardless of how I felt, I had to remind myself all the time I'm representing Secretary Clinton, President Obama, and our government, and I can't really say sometimes what I really want to say or how I want to say it.

Do most ambassadors have a security detail?

It depends on the country. Because The Bahamas is such a heavy law enforcement post and I help agencies make sure they put the bad people away, there's more protection for that reason. It made sense to me [when] someone said the best way to hurt [the president] is to hurt his representative or make the representative's life miserable somehow. That's happened in the Foreign Service; it doesn't happen frequently but it has happened enough where we have to be very protective with our people. We're like that about anybody, whether it's an ambassador or anyone coming off of a cruise ship. My main job as an ambassador was to make sure American citizens while in The Bahamas were safe.

How does tourism drive the Bahamian economy?

I would say it is the No. 1 industry for the Bahamas. What I am seeing is a lot of American businessmen and women coming in and doing lots of different real estate deals. The beauty is they are also expanding into alternative energy. You have a country that is so close to us that has the ocean, the sun and the wind. I held two energy conferences while I was there and attended many as well. I think the Bahamians are now opening up to other attractions besides tourism. While they're expanding in tourism, which is great, they're also realizing they have a lot to offer.

There's cultural tourism. There was an underground railroad to The Bahamas from Florida. If [slaves] got to The Bahamas, they were able to buy their freedom and that's how [The Bahamas] ended up with more churches per capita than anywhere else in the world. All the slaves that came there to get their freedom came from the southern states and brought their church roots to The Bahamas. Dr. [Martin Luther] King [Jr.] wrote his Nobel Peace [Prize] speech in The Bahamas. He was there a week before he was assassinated. He would go there to get his mind clear and to escape all the ills he was dealing with in the States. It's a very interesting history The Bahamas has with the United States.

Are you involved with Obama's re-election campaign?

I hope to be [but] I don't know to what capacity yet. No matter how long of a term you serve as ambassador, you always still serve the president, so when he asks, you do. If that's what's going to happen then I am definitely open to it.

Tell us about your family's music publishing business.

My father has a music publishing business [Avant Garde and Interior Music Corp.] and he has record companies [including Sussex Records and Tabu Records]. He was also chairman of Motown Records. My parents moved here from New York in 1967, and they've been in the same house in Beverly Hills for 43 years.

You were vice president of Interior Music Publishing and Avant Garde Music Publishing for about 10 years. Tell us about that.

I love music publishing. My dad realized he should start his company a long time ago. We have a small catalogue but a very active catalogue. I always wanted to be a music supervisor when I was in the music business. I loved the idea of taking a song and seeing [how] that specific song changes a scene in a commercial or a TV show or a movie.

When people would say we'd like to license this song, it's amazing how protective you get, because you [would] negotiate, "It's worth this," or "I don't think it's good for this scene." A couple of times I had lessons learned. There were certain things I said yes to not knowing the videogame business well. One of our songs almost ended up in some insane videogame I wouldn't let my stepson play. I love that side of the business. I love all types of music and I have such respect for musicians and songwriters. I'm trying to work on a music documentary with my husband. That's the one thing I missed when I was in The Bahamas; I missed being creative.

Were you involved with music at Beverly High?

I was in drama; I loved my drama class. I loved everything at Beverly. My stepkids [Tony and Sarah Sarandos] are [at Beverly] now and they love it, but for me, I talk about it like it was college. I had the best time. I enjoyed all my teachers. I even liked my principal; Mr. [Sol] Levine was the best.

[Drama] was more of a hobby for me. I liked debating more, and I played soccer. My mom [Jacqueline Avant] always kept me active in sports growing up. I think I was one of the first girls in AYSO and [one of] the first girls on the [Little League] team. [Former Board of Education President] Steven [Fenton] and I laughed about it. He said, "We hated when you got to bat because no one wanted to strike you out because you were the only girl." My mom always put me in a position to be the first girl doing something. In The Bahamas, I was the first African American female to be appointed to The Bahamas, and the youngest ever to be appointed.

I was always interested in other cultures. As a senior [at Beverly], I did a Russian studies class and I took a trip to Russia [when it was still the Soviet Union in 1985] with a bunch of my classmates. It was a very different time, but the best time of my life. When I see Principal [Carter] Paysinger now, [I think], "I remember Coach Paysinger!" How fantastic!

I loved growing up in Beverly Hills. I [have] moved to a house [that's] not even a half a block away from my elementary school, Hawthorne. Every day I drive by or walk by, I have the fondest memories of elementary school and high school.

How are you involved with the Beverly Hills Athletic Alumni Association?

I had to disassociate myself when I became ambassador, but I [was] very involved and who could say no to Steven [Fenton's] passion? It was great because it was like a mini reunion every time we all went to a meeting. That again is a love for Beverly High. It's just such pride and it's such a great school. I know it's gone through a lot of changes; it still deserves all of our attention. Hopefully I can start back on my board.

Tell us about your husband Ted Sarandos' role as chief content officer at Netflix and your stepkids at Beverly.

I'm very lucky because when I started dating Ted and found out he had two pre-teens, I thought "Oh my God," but it was always warmth, kindness and goodness from the beginning. I'm really happy to be home with them permanently now. It's great to be back in Beverly Hills, too, because I've bounced around between New York and Manhattan Beach. When I met Teddy he was living in Beverly Hills already and when we got married, we wanted a bigger space. I wanted to make sure I stayed in Beverly Hills because I love it so much.

Our lives are very busy. [Ted] travels a lot, but he's extremely creative and focused and logical at the same time, which is very rare. We connect very easily on a creative level. We love talking about TV and film and that's how we connected when we met.

[When] I pick up my stepson [who is a freshman] from school—he's on the baseball team—all these memories come back from 20 years ago. It's nice to be with my family in one place as opposed to flying all over the place. [My stepdaughter is] a senior. She's a great artist and excellent photographer. We'll see where she ends up. It's an exciting time in this house. It feels good to have this other side of me to be able to nurture and guide, and direct and protect. I was doing that [in The Bahamas], but for different people and for different reasons. Being home, it's nice to be around family and realize the importance of being an anchor here.

What's next for you?

I miss philanthropic work. This is what lives in my spirit, working with other people and helping as many people as I can. I would love to get [back] on the boards of Best Buddies [International, a global volunteer organization], and the Bogart Pediatric [Research Program, which supports pediatric cancer research]. If I get back on the campaign, I'm thinking of focusing on art and media and bringing more of that [to the campaign]. I'll see where it goes but I do know the focus for me is to get back my creative and humanitarian sides, and to be able to do a lot of the things that I couldn't do for the past two years. It was a good tradeoff, but I miss it.

engaged consultant Fehr and Peers to work on the pilot bike route program.

Fehr and Peers was tasked with finding potential bike corridors that could be constructed within the existing right-of-way, and without impacting parking and vehicle travel lanes. The consultant presented four possible corridors, two north-south and two east-west: Beverly Drive, Crescent Drive, Carmelita Avenue and Charleville Boulevard.

Levine said staff is reviewing the recommendation, which the committee will discuss at its next meeting in January.

Mark Elliott of Better Bike Beverly Hills said he was concerned the requirement that a bike route not impact existing parking and vehicle travel lanes would eliminate South Beverly Drive from consideration.

"The key to the bike community's efforts here is congestion is a problem and we need to think a little bit outside the box so we can bring safer streets to cyclists," Elliott said.

The committee also discussed possible improvements to promote safety at intersections.

"We heard from the biking community what their interests and concerns were," Levine said. "They basically want to have better signage, which would eliminate ambiguity for them."

Elliott said the Olympic Boulevard and South Beverly Drive intersection was the site of a recent vehicle-cyclist collision.

"That cyclist pointed out to me heading southbound on South Beverly in the right-hand lane presents a clear danger because it's ambiguous whether southbound is going to follow Beverly as it winds to the left or if the continued mode of travel is straight south as the crow flies, which is Beverwil," Elliott said.

Elliott identified Santa Monica and Wilshire boulevards as another intersection that could use improved signage. Elliott suggested designating a "bike box" that would place cyclists ahead of vehicles at traffic signals.

With regard to facilities, Levine said the City has created a map showing the location of existing bike racks in the City. The City plans to post the map on beverlyhills.org, but it has not yet been posted. Levine said the committee is starting to look into a process that would allow merchants to request bike racks for their businesses.

"I've been pressing [the City] for a rack request program for more than a year," Elliott said. "I've had a couple merchants call me who would love to have a bike rack [at their businesses]. When the City gets a call they don't know what to do with that call because there is no provision."

Levine said the committee is faced with the challenge of starting a bicycle program from scratch.

"It is an important issue and we are trying to be as transparent as we can and move as quickly as we can, given the resources, time, and anything else available to us," Levine said. "It's a very complicated process because we're really going from ground

BHHS Boys Basketball Team Loses In Tournament Championship Game

Norman runner competes in national finals

By Steven Herbert

Insufficient energy and desire kept the Beverly High boys' basketball team from winning the Sax Elliott Invitational for the first time since 1984, Norman coach Jarvis Turner said after Saturday night's 55-51 loss to Leuzinger in the championship game at the Swim-Gym.

Beverly Hills led 40-36 entering the fourth quarter, but was outscored 15-3 over the first five minutes, 39 seconds of the quarter. Eric Childress made three 3-point baskets and Treyvion Anderson one during the run that gave the Olympians (6-2) a 54-43 lead with 2:21 to play.

The Normans cut the deficit to six, 55-49, with 34.4 seconds left on 3-point baskets by Austin Mills and Frank Brown. Mills was fouled taking a 3-point shot with 16.6 seconds and made the first two free throws. He missed the third and neither team scored again.

"I thought that our team was a better basketball team collectively," Turner said. "There were three 50-50 balls on three consecutive possessions (at the beginning of the fourth quarter) and Leuzinger got all three of those possessions. That kind of changed the tide of the game."

Beverly Hills trailed 25-23 at halftime, then outscored Leuzinger 17-11 in the third quarter as Mills scored eight of his game-high 27 points, including making two of his four 3-point baskets.

Brown added eight points, Mike Lanier seven, Nick Retskin four, Willie Green and Brodrick Smith two each and Ben Cohen one for the Normans (4-2).

Beverly Hills 80, Fremont 72

Mills scored 26 points and made five 3-point baskets in a semifinal game Friday night at the Swim-Gym.

Brown added 20, making three 3-point baskets, Green 10, all in the second half, Lanier seven, Smith six, Ronan Massana five and Retskin three.

Beverly Hills 66, Hamilton 57

Mills scored 31 points, 28 over the final three quarters, and made five three-point baskets as the Normans concluded pool play with a victory Dec. 7 at the Swim-Gym.

Brown and Massana scored 10 each, Smith seven, Cohen four and Topaz Levi and Retskin two each.

Girls' Cross Country

Foot Locker West Regional

Junior Sydney Segal finished seventh, becoming the first Beverly High girl runner to qualify for the National Finals.

Segal completed the five-kilometer course at Mt. San Antonio College in Walnut in 18 minutes, 32 seconds Dec. 3, 15 seconds behind Nikki Hiltz of Aptos High school.

Karlie Garcia of Oakmont High School in Roseville won in 17:46.

Foot Locker National Finals

Segal finished 32nd in the 40-runner field Saturday, completing the five-kilometer course through Morley Field in Balboa Park in San Diego in 18:21, one second behind both the 30th and 31st-place finishers.

Molly Seidel, a senior from University Lake School in Hartland, Wisc. won in 17:22.

Norman goalkeeper Ida Trevino made three saves over the opening 60 minutes, while teammate Sydney Cohen stopped two shots over the final 20 and allowed the Olympians' lone goal.

Zhamack Foulambaksh also had an assist for Beverly Hills.

Boys' Soccer

South Bay/Westside Tournament

Caio Carvalho scored off Bryan Khalilrad's assist in the first half for the Normans Dec. 6 at El Segundo High School.

Goalkeeper Adrian Spitz made three saves and allowed a goal in the first half for Beverly Hills (3-0-1).

Norman goalkeeper Matt Davidov made five saves in the second half.

Beverly Hills led in shots 12-9.

Wrestling

Turkey Duels

Beverly Hills won four of five matches and Norman wrestlers Dylan Lojac, Beau Shane and Ralph Yun all won gold medals Nov. 26 at Chaminade High School.

The Normans defeated Westlake, 48-36, and Harvard-Westlake, 42-39, lost to St. John Bosco, 63-18, defeated Monroe, 60-18, and Chaminade, 58-18.

Yun, wrestling at 162 pounds, won all five of his matches. Lojac, who wrestled in the 154-pound division, and Beau Shane, who wrestled at 128, both won four of their five matches.

Beverly Hills wrestlers Dakota Anderson (140), Nathan Bahk (108), Matthew Kohanbash (122) and Marshall Stevens (198) all won silver medals with 4-1 records.

BEVERLY HILLS EDUCATION FOUNDATION

Your neighborhood schools need you.

Our five public schools are a treasured asset of this City, beacons of education and enrichment, and the reason most often cited by those who choose to buy or rent in Beverly Hills. Although our District continues to offer an excellent, and always improving, education for our K-12 students, the BHUSD has continually depended on the funds raised by our Foundation in order to do so. In these challenging economic times, our children – our City's greatest resource – need you now, more than ever.

Your generous donations to the BHEF are targeted toward the areas in which our kids find their passions. The BHEF is the only organization which contributes toward the salaries of teachers, coaches, specialists, aides and assistants – the people who work with our children on a daily basis as they strive to become the students, athletes and artists they have always dreamt of being.

Please join your friends and neighbors – parents, grandparents, civic leaders, homeowners, renters, local businesses and other ardent supporters of our City's public schools – and donate now to the most significant Foundation fundraising program of the year: our BHEF ANNUAL APPEAL. We ask that you make a meaningful gift, one that reflects who you are and the value you place on the education and enrichment of our children.

Indeed, your neighborhood schools need you.

As do the thousands of students who are the future of our community.

GIVE NOW. MAKE A DIFFERENCE NOW.
