Mirisch pulls subway resolution; agrees to reword

Barry Brucker's map showing a hypothetical direct route from a hypothetical station at San Vicente and Wilshire in Los Angeles and proposed station at Constellation and Avenue of the Stars. Brucker says this route could be an "unintended consequence" if Beverly Hills opposes the subway project and Metro eliminates stations in Beverly Hills

On the heels of the City Council's discussion Tuesday night of a resolution opposing the Westside Subway Extension, the Metro board's Planning and Programming

Committee voted 3-1-1 yesterday to recommend approval of the final EIR to the full Metro board.

Metro Second Vice Chair Diane DuBois and Board members Zev Yaroslavsky and Richard Katz voted yes, First Vice Chair Michael D. Antonovich voted no, and Board member Pam O'Connor abstained from voting on the report that recommends tunneling under Beverly High.

The City Council Tuesday night unanimously expressed its opposition to the subway tunneling under Beverly High, but did not immediately reach agreement on how to express that opposition to the full Metro board before it considers the final EIR April 26.

Following nearly two hours of discussion, the City Council agreed to delegate the task of drafting a resolution to Mayor Willie

HAPPY BIRTHDAY, ROGER! HALF MOON CAY

Brien and Vice Mayor John Mirisch, the City Council's legislative liaisons, incorporating comments from all five councilmembers.

Mirisch introduced a resolution stating the City Council's "opposition to the Westside Subway Extension Project as proposed in Metro's FEIR/FEIS, specifically the alignment proposed by Metro through Beverly Hills, the designation of the La Cienega station as an interim transit station and the selection of the Century City station at Constellation Avenue. The City Council will take such steps to implement its opposition as circumstances warrant."

Mirisch said the resolution was not intended to oppose the concept of a subway in the City for good.

"It's supposed to show resolve against much of what has happened and the tactics where many of us feel nobody has been listening to the community," Mirisch said. "I believe it's implicit in the resolution should Metro listen to us and take action accordingly, we're more than happy to open things up and reconsider our position against the subway. It's not opposition to any and all subways; it's opposition to the subway project as proposed in the FEIR/FEIS and as recommended by Metro staff."

Councilmember Lili Bosse said she felt the process had been a "waiting game" since the release of the draft EIR in 2010.

"I believe we need to make a statement tonight to MTA because the subway will either be funded by [federal program] 30-10 or a phased approach," Bosse said. "The phased approach has the La Cienega [station] in Phase I. Beverly Hills is needed to complete Phase I. I will not risk waiting while MTA considers we can be tied up in litigation until they plan to tunnel for the Century City alignment years later and in the meantime disrupt our community with tunneling of the other stops in our city. I am on record: I withdraw all support of the Westside Subway Extension through Beverly Hills, but will reevaluate when MTA officially rejects the tunnel under Beverly High alignment."

Other councilmembers were not willing to express wholesale opposition to the subway, which proposes stops in Beverly Hills at Wilshire and La Cienega and Wilshire and Rodeo.

"I would support something along the lines of, 'The City of Beverly Hills hereby reiterates strong opposition to tunneling under historic Beverly High and expresses a strong opposition to Metro staff's recommendation related to the route selection of the Century City station at Constellation,'" Brien said.

Brien and Councilmember Barry Brucker proposed urging Metro to trench along Santa Monica Boulevard to investigate the presence of active fault lines under the Santa Monica Boulevard alignment. Brien proposed stating the City Council would take "legal action if necessary" if Metro votes to tunnel under Beverly High.

Brucker proposed stating Beverly Hills' support of the subway extension west of the Rodeo Drive station remained predicated on Metro choosing an alignment that does not tunnel under Beverly High. He said opposing the entire subway project could have unintended consequences.

"What I wanted to do is emphasize strong bullet points, but I also did not want to put ourselves in a situation where we could have unintended consequences of the City of Beverly Hills saying we will do everything in our power to eliminate stations in Beverly Hills and Metro actually saying, 'Okay, but I'm still tunneling under the high school,'" Brucker said.

Brucker said he asked City staff to create a map to show what the direct route would be from the nearest major intersection to Beverly Hills, which is San Vicente and Wilshire in Los Angeles, to the proposed Constellation Boulevard station in Century City if Metro eliminated stations in Beverly Hills. The map shows an alignment cutting through the 200 and 300 blocks of Beverly Hills between Olympic and Wilshire and tunneling under Beverly High.

Metro has not considered this hypothetical alignment or a station at San Vicente, neither of which are included in the Westside Subway Extension Final EIR.

City Attorney Larry Wiener said Metro has significant authority when it comes to using a public right-of-way like Wilshire Boulevard for the subway, but a route cutting across the 200 and 300 blocks of South Beverly Hills would present "significantly greater challenges" because it would require more eminent domain to obtain subsurface rights to properties.

Southwest Homeowners Association President Ken Goldman, who earlier in the meeting urged the City Council to adopt Mirisch's resolution, walked out during Brucker's comments.

"I think I and any number of people in the audience were incredibly frustrated," Goldman said Wednesday. "It was more, 'wait, wait, wait.' The council has had more than two years to study every one of these issues that were raised yesterday and once again it's one excuse after the other for not taking aggressive action."

Bosse said she was offended the hypothetical map was not shared with all five councilmembers prior to the meeting. Mirisch said Wednesday he did not see the map prior to the meeting.

"I feel [the map] was irrelevant, and I feel it was a complete red herring," Mirisch said. "I think the suggestion that Metro would tunnel under Beverly Hills without having any stops in Beverly Hills is absurd. The reason is they need the ridership to get federal funding."

Councilmember Julian Gold also expressed concerns about unintended consequences.

"We need to step up this fight," Gold said. "As we do it, we need to be smart and thoughtful. We need to understand the implications of what we do and the unintended consequences of those actions. 'Before all else, do no harm' [is] a guiding principle in medicine. We have not done ourselves a favor in this battle if we harm many homeowners in the south part of our town, or cripple our businesses and local economy."

Prior to the City Council's discussion, former Mayor Steve Webb said when he was mayor in 2006, the City Council appointed the 18-member mass transit committee and eventually unanimously supported the committee's report on the subway project.

"We lobbied very hard to have stations on La Cienega and stations on Rodeo Drive," Webb said. "What I'm suggesting to you tonight is you owe it to those 18 committee members, you owe it to this community not to react to the other 100 people that are here tonight. You need to form a committee, you need to reach out to the community, you need to get input because you don't know what the unanticipated consequences will be to the passing of the resolution. They could be fiscally [and politically] disastrous to this City."

Webb also pointed out that under the best of circumstances, Metro would not begin tunneling under Beverly High until 2024.

"I'm willing to bet you sitting here today if you want a 21st [century] education for kids in the future, you're going to have to tear that high school down and rebuild it," Webb said. "Most experts will tell you that and there's the possibility that you can build a new structure that would be compatible with the subway."

Webb's comments drew audible protests from some in Council Chambers.

In order to send the message prior to Metro's board meeting on April 26, the City Council agreed for Mirisch and Brien to write a resolution on the council's behalf, since there is not another council meeting scheduled until May. If Mirisch and Brien are unable to come to resolution, the City Council agreed Brien would write a letter outlining the City Council's concerns and position on the subway.

Metro's Planning and Programming Committee consists of Yaroslavsky, a Los Angeles County supervisor; DuBois, Lakewood vice mayor; Katz, a former San Fernando Valley Assemblymember; O'Connor, a Santa Monica City Councilmember; and Antonovich, a Los Angeles County supervisor who represents the San Gabriel Valley.

Mirisch said he had hoped the Council would take action Tuesday night.

"My main concern was to remedy a mistake, and that mistake is that our city's platform is in support of the subway," Mirisch said. "That decision was made before any information about tunneling under the high school was available."

installment of the show's six-episode first season aired Sunday night, attracting over 1.5 million viewers.

The show has been accompanied by controversy, including the West Hollywood City Council's vote March 19 to condemn the show for perpetuating negative stereotypes of the Persian community.

One of the show's stars Reza Farahan, a 1991 Beverly High graduate, said Tuesday not all the feedback has been negative, but he had harsh words for former Beverly Hills Mayor Jimmy Delshad, who has criticized the show.

"I just got back from New York, where I received the most amazing warm welcome from every walk of life, but what was really wonderful and really special to me was the Persians out there are so loving and so appreciative, which makes me detest Jimmy Delshad," Farahan said. "All of a sudden he's out speaking against my show. Your time is done, you were mayor, keep it moving. Don't ride my coattails. It's embarrassing."

Before the show aired, Delshad was quoted in the Los Angeles Times expressing concerns Shahs would leave viewers with a negative impression of Persians. Delshad told the Times he was "afraid this program will take us back and make us look like undesirable people."

When the Weekly interviewed Farahan in Issue #647, he said the only reason he agreed to be on the show was to try to serve as an inspiration to gay youth and gay Persians.

"I've received hundreds and hundreds of messages that just touch me and warm my heart and make me feel like putting myself out there and getting criticism from Jimmy Delshad [is] well worth it," Farahan said. "He's using my platform to do interviews and put his name out there, and it's shameful. I actually have a powerful message to get across, and he should be embarrassed for himself."

In response to Farahan's comment that Delshad was using Farahan's platform, Delshad said Wednesday, "I don't know what platform he has, but I have been mayor of Beverly Hills twice, and the highest [Persian] elected official in America. I'm not following anyone else's platform."

Delshad said he has watched the show and he does not believe it represents the Persian community in America.

"This show does not show the good side that we have," Delshad said. "I think that this show is only for the purpose of the greed of taking something that's in the news, which is the Persian community, and using that to enrich the people involved."

Farahan said he thinks jealousy is behind much of the criticism coming from viewers based in Los Angeles.

"I have received at least 40 or 50 messages from people whether they know me or not, tweeting me, Facebooking me, asking me,

Planning process for Roxbury Park still under way

Recreation and Parks liaisons Mayor Willie Brien and Councilmember Julian Gold are continuing to assess the programming needs for the Roxbury Park community center renovation project at a series of meetings with staff and community members.

"We've gone through current programming needs. We're looking at additional programming requests," Brien said. "Then we'll put programming in based on what we believe is a reasonable space allocation keeping the same [guidelines] we started this review with, that we are going to preserve greenspace and decrease the size of what was the prior discussed community center."

Another meeting had been scheduled for this past Wednesday, but it has been moved to a date to be determined due to yesterday's Metro Planning and Programming Committee's meeting about the Westside Subway Extension final EIR.

Brien said the liaison is also evaluating the cost of resolving the park's irrigation and drainage issues, the cost to refurbish the children's play area, and also the comparison of renovating the existing community center with building new.

Brien said he expects to bring the liaison's assessment of programming needs for the full City Council's consideration in May or June.

"We want to present our assessment of programming needs present and reasonable programming needs in the future to prioritize what the council thinks is important," Brien said. "We'll also be talking about size and design of the multipurpose room."

Brien said the liaisons would also present the council with feedback from the community, including former Board of Education member Gerald Lunn's proposal to locate the community center on the northeast corner of Olympic Boulevard and Roxbury Drive with a single level of underground parking beneath the building. Lunn first presented his proposal in a series of guest columns in the Weekly, which concluded in Issue #652.

"Gerald Lunn put a lot of time and energy and was thoughtful in what he was trying to accomplish and is trying to bridge different facets of needs and wants in the community," Brien said. "I respected him and appreciated the fact he came forward and shared [his idea]. That's part of the dialogue in making a good decision in what we will ultimately do with the park."

Lunn presented his plan to the liaisons April 5, and received a mixed reaction from meeting attendees. Southwest Homeowners Association President Ken Goldman called the plan idiotic.

"In a highly urban area, open areas and grass are to be prized, not shut away, and by creating buildings along Olympic, you're isolating the park from the adjacent residential area and from Olympic, and there's just no sense to it," Goldman said.

Goldman expressed concern about the potential safety and traffic issues that could result from the underground parking deck. Goldman said he preferred the existing location to the corner of Olympic and Roxbury.

"The original plans for the Roxbury renovation called for the building to be along Olympic and for an underground garage. Both of those were summarily abandoned when community discussion began, and there's no reason to resurrect them," Goldman said.

Ideally, Goldman said he would like to see the community

"Why are you on the show? No one called me. Why didn't they ask me to be on show?" Farahan said. "It's not like it's Reza's dad's production. It's Ryan Seacrest Productions. If they didn't come to you, they didn't come to you. Relax."

Although many were quick to judge, Farahan said he has also heard from former critics turned admirers.

"I have to say a lot of people that were criticizing us are now fans," Farahan said. "I get messages from people saying, 'When the show came out, I didn't know what to expect. Everyone was talking s--- about it, and now I'm hooked. I can't get enough.'" center rebuilt or remodeled to accommodate existing programs. He said he does not believe a two-story structure is necessary, nor does he think a full-size basketball gymnasium is needed, since the BHUSD may be building additional basketball facilities with Measure E funds.

Lunn said according to his plans, the building would be screened by tall trees.

"If you're driving east on Olympic Boulevard, the only view that would be blocked is of the apartment building on the east side of Roxbury," Lunn said. "It seems to me Italian cypress trees are prettier than apartment buildings. If you're heading west on Olympic it would mainly block your view of the existing clubhouse building, which is not a pretty building."

Regarding the safety concerns about underground parking, Lunn said he has proposed a network of 12 security cameras that would cover the community center and underground parking area that would be monitored by a security staff member. He also proposed attendants in the parking area.

Lunn said the proposed modular design of the building would make it easier to monitor security, and also allow the use of movable walls to accommodate different space and programming needs in the center.

Lunn said he would be open to re-designing his plans without underground parking, but surface parking would take up valuable greenspace.

"It's still better than surface parking at the south part of the park, because the north part of the park is less desirable greenspace," Lunn said. "If you're going to put parking anywhere, put it along the busy, noisy, air quality-deprived area, instead of putting it in the middle of the neighborhood where it's not busy, not noisy and the air quality is pretty good."

Goldman said he thinks the process so far has been open and the liaisons are listening to all feedback shared at the meetings. However, Goldman said some of the information presented by staff has not been entirely accurate or straightforward, including pie charts showing programming needs that did not add up to 100 percent, and giving more weight to community center programs that are held only occasionally.

"We've got to get to a situation where the community and the council is presented with straight-up, accurate information," Goldman said. "So far, the entire discourse on Roxbury Park has been a banner for how not to communicate."

Waxman urges Metro to put safety first with subway decision

Henry Waxman

In a letter addressed to Metro CEO Art Leahy, Rep. Henry Waxman (D-Los Angeles) urged Metro to put safety first as it considers its choice of alignments for the Westside Subway Extension next week.

"I have heard a great deal of concern from the Beverly Hills community about the proposed Century City station at Constellation Boulevard, because of the possible safety risks involved with tunneling under Beverly High," Waxman wrote in the letter dated April 12. "The City of Beverly Hills and the [BHUSD] have commissioned independent studies and made a strong case that the route poses safety risks and would be less desirable for cost, speed and ridership. These concerns must be weighed carefully alongside the study commissioned by Metro, which identified serious seismic concerns for alternate station locations on Santa Monica Boulevard."

Waxman said safety should be the Metro board's No. 1 concern when it meets April 26 to consider the final EIR for the Westside Subway Extension.

"I would urge the Metro Board to only choose a route that would require tunneling under the school if there is a definitive conclusion that it is the safest alternative," Waxman wrote.

Metro spokesperson Dave Sotero said safety is Metro's No. 1 priority.

"Metro has received the letter and will not make any recommendation that does not ensure the safety of the public," Sotero said.

Waxman's Communications Director Karen Lightfoot said the letter was the first Waxman had sent to Metro regarding tunneling under Beverly High. She said Waxman's offices in Washington D.C. and Los Angeles have received just under 50 calls, e-mails and letters about the project in the last six months, with about two-thirds of them coming in the past two months. Lightfoot said constituents' comments have expressed both concern about and support for the subway project.

Beverly Vista principal search down to two finalists, board to vote on district office reorganization Tuesday

After reviewing more than 80 applications and interviewing 10 candidates for the Beverly Vista principal position, Superintendent Gary Woods said Monday the BHUSD selection committee has narrowed down the field to two finalists.

The district is in the process of running background checks on the finalists, and Woods expects to present one candidate to the Board of Education for its approval at next Tuesday evening's formal meeting. Principal Irene Stern is retiring for a second time at the end of the school year. Stern returned as principal in 2010 after having previously served as principal 1999 to 2006.

The first round of interviews involved a larger community-based panel of about 10 to 15 members, Woods said. A smaller panel, including Woods and representatives of the Board of Education, conducted the second-round interviews.

"When you're dealing with principals, you're looking for a lot of community input," Woods said.

The interview process also involved an agency called Target Success, which conducted additional phone interviews with the finalists, Woods said.

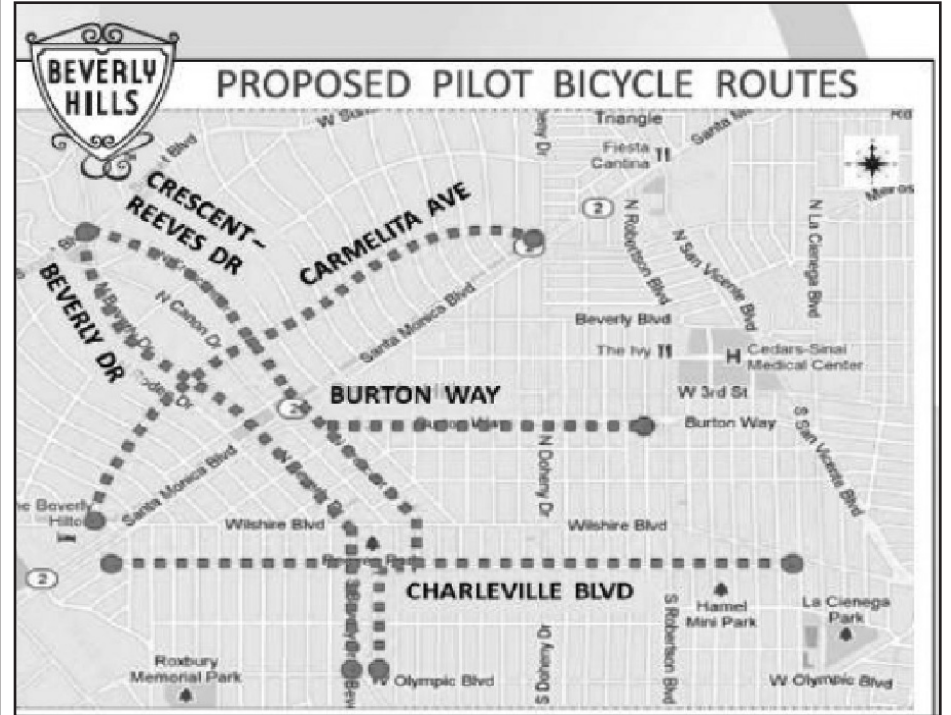

"This [service provides] a third-party, objective analysis on the characteristics candidates possess that lead to demonstrated success," Woods said.

This Tuesday, Woods also plans to present his "reorganization" plan for the district office, in response to Assistant Superintendent of Business Services Alex Cherniss' departure from the district at the end of March to work at the Los Angeles County Office of Education.

It is unclear whether or not the district has plans to actually replace the assistant superintendent of business services position, since Woods said he would not reveal the details of the proposed reorganization plan until Tuesday. Woods said he has been discussing options with the board over the course of about a month.

"It's a simplified plan with very clear lines of authority," Woods said. "I need this team functioning at high levels. We need to be efficient and effective. [We'll be] matching up a number of positions with skill sets that are currently here, and I hope to do some things in terms of how we reorganize that really is putting our district in a positive spot for the future."

In the meantime, Woods said administrators including Assistant Superintendent of Human Resources Dawnalyn Murakawa-Leopard, Interim Director of Curriculum, Instruction and Professional Development Jennifer Tedford, Budget & Food Services Executive Director Mary Anne McCabe, and himself have taken on Cherniss' former

Residents voice support, safety concerns for pilot bike route program

More than half a dozen residents addressed the Traffic & Parking Commission bicycle ad hoc committee April 11 to express their views about a proposed pilot bike route program in the City of Beverly Hills.

Commissioner Jeff Levine, who spearheads the committee with Vice Chair Alan Grushcow and Commissioner Ira Friedman, said most comments focused on safety issues but were generally supportive of the City's effort to create a bike route for Beverly Hills.

The committee has been tasked with studying potential bike routes and making a recommendation to the City Council. The committee is studying three east-west options and two north-south options, that would be designated with road signs and "sharrows," which are painted markings indicating the road is to be shared by automobiles and bicycles.

The east-west bike routes to be reviewed are on Carmelita Avenue within City limits; Burton Way between Crescent Drive and Robertson Boulevard; and Charleville Boulevard between La Cienega and South Santa Monica boulevards. The north-south routes to be reviewed are Beverly Drive between Sunset and Olympic boulevards; and Crescent-Charleville-Reeves between Sunset and Olympic boulevards.

"Most people were voicing concerns about safety issues," Levine said. "There were comments [that residents] liked the idea but they wanted to make sure it's done in a smart way and as safely as possible."

Mark Elliot, founder of Better Bike Beverly Hills, said as a whole, the route options the City has identified are "the perfect core for a bike network" in Beverly Hills. Elliot said establishing a limited pilot program was a good start, but he said the City had identified the easiest steps for establishing a route.

"That's because they constrained the engineers who did feasibility studies that said, 'We won't change traffic flow or lose parking,'" Elliot said.

Elliot said Beverly Drive and Charleville are already popular with cyclists, but safety on both roads could be improved. Charleville connects with bike lanes in Century City, Elliot said.

Elliot said diagonal parking on Beverly makes it difficult for drivers to see cyclists as they back out of parking spots. To improve safety on Charleville, Elliot suggested the possibility of removing one side of parking to widen the road traveled by cyclists and automobiles.

"[Someone commented,] 'We'll evolve these facilities as demand increases,'" Elliot said. "We don't build roads like that. We build roads to anticipate capacity and create safe travel conditions. It's the same with bicycles. We want to anticipate the demand and encourage it."

If a route is established by the City Council, the committee would monitor the pilot program for a period of 6 to 12 months, Levine said, and then make a determination.

The next meeting will take place this Wednesday at 7 p.m. in the Conservation Room of the City's Public Works Building at 345 North Foothill Road. The Traffic and Parking Commission will convene at a special meeting May 9 at 7 p.m. at in Room 280-A of City Hall to develop recommendations to present to the City Council.

Sanity or subways

Behind the raging battles

By Rudy Cole

Will Beverly Hills be successful in preventing tunneling under the high school for the Westside subway?

Is the alignment (route) we prefer—Santa Monica Boulevard west of Wilshire Boulevard—really totally unsafe?

Tuesday, the Beverly Hills City Council considered a politically correct resolution: If Metro insists on the Constellation Route to Century City and tunneling under our high school, we will withdraw our support of the whole subway project.

Some reality checks: Legislatively, there is absolutely nothing our city council can do to prevent Metro from deciding on routes or even stations.

We can use whatever political clout we may have, or in a most extreme scenario, challenge Metro in court, but so far the only achievement of our more strident, accusatory voices has been to totally antagonize the Metro decision-makers.

Do you think it really helps our cause to accuse the Metro elected officials of being controlled by Century City developers? Or using the route battle as a means of settling old political scores or partisan interests? This is doing a real disservice to our city.

Here are the real challenges: Is tunneling under the high school hazardous? Is the Santa Monica alternative even less safe?

True, there are subways all over the world that run under public buildings, residential areas and even schools, but not under schools in California with one possible single exception. The likely risks of digging under our only high school are too uncertain and simply don't feel right.

Not going under the school does present challenges. Providing a station in the middle of Century City hits the most likely ridership. But is one large block to Santa Monica that important?

Metro leaders now make a most compelling and actually new argument: A station at Santa Monica and Century City would be built on a "known" earthquake fault. As one elected Metro official told me, somewhat heatedly, "we are not going to risk public safety by putting a station at a site we have been told is an active fault."

This is new because during all the previous discussions on routes, and when most Beverly Hills city and community leaders supported the Westside extension, including an inclusive citizens' subway committee, there was absolutely no mention of earthquake dangers on Santa Monica Boulevard.

However, if the dangers are real, Metro has a solid argument, no matter the timing of the findings.

There is another process that should be considered, and it is what Cong. Henry Waxman insisted on before giving his approval to federal funding for subway tunneling near Fairfax.

Metro and the City should agree to a peer review of the scientific studies. Each side could appoint two "experts" and the four agree on a fifth-person chair. This committee could carefully study all the data on safety and the sometimes contradictory findings and make a recommendation that just might alleviate everyone's concerns.

If the study finds that the dangers of creating a Santa Monica Boulevard station are not provable, then that is the route that must be selected. If not, it is entirely possible that route choices need to go back to the drawing board and all options, including south of Olympic be reconsidered.

There is one additional element of the route choices that needs to be evaluated: Park-and-ride facilities. The further west the subway routes go, the greater the need for parking facilities near stations.

What about the allegation that the Century City route is being pushed because it benefits a developer? That must be great news for JMB, the proponents of a mammoth new building at Constellation. So far, the only message they are receiving from the councilman in the district, Paul Koretz, is that their plans are 100 percent more than could ever be approved! Some clout.

There is one other problem that could make all of this moot: Metro may simply not have the money to complete Phase Two and the project could end, for many years, at La Cienega. Yesterday, Los Angeles Mayor Antonio Villaraigosa proposed extending the time for Measure R sales tax so that the subway could be "completed." Remember, this project was originally called the "Subway to the Sea" but its western terminal is Westwood, not Santa Monica.

What is almost amusing, if it were not so destructive, are the irrational charges that our city council is not really fighting tunneling under the high school. How reasonable opponents of the route could have allowed themselves to be used by people who have very private, personal motives in attacking the council majority because of issues that have absolutely nothing to do with tunneling surprises me, and many of them I know and respect.

Worth repeating: The only thing those with personal battles with the city council have achieved is to make Metro less open to compromise. As Councilmember Julian Gold pointed out Tuesday, he stated when he ran he opposed tunneling under the high school, he has said that consistently since he was elected and has never changed his view.

Mayor Willie Brien detailed what the city has done to protect the high school: Allocated $1 million in city funding for scientific and legal experts to help prevent tunneling and to support a Santa Monica Boulevard route.

Councilmember Barry Brucker expressed his own annoyance at what he had hoped was a Metro compromise that could solve the problem by putting a subway and station above ground on Santa Monica Boulevard. Just before Tuesday's council meeting, Metro staff shot down the idea.

Mayor Brien, in responding to critics, pointed out the only possible tool the city has to use if and when we lose the battle, is to bring legal action to prevent tunneling. "There is no one to sue until a route is approved by the Metro board," Brien said, and, of course, he is absolutely right.

Although I know that both Councilmember Lili Bosse and John Mirisch are well intentioned, efforts to divide them from the rest of the council are not helpful, and sends the wrong message to Metro.

But Councilmember John Mirisch showed some real independence and a rational approach Tuesday when he agreed to work with Mayor Brien on a resolution that clearly lays down the council views on supporting the subway. Neither he, or Councilmember Bosse, insisted on a vote on the Mirisch resolution, permitting a unified message.

Science aside, tunneling under our high school simply doesn't feel right, and sometimes you have to go with your gut. But to repeat the obvious: Whipping up hysteria and using the subway route dispute in an attempt to discredit the council and possibly help win some future election is not what we are about. The safety of this and future generations of high school students and teachers is what should and does matter most.

So far we have been battling Metro staff. Many of these professionals are competent and doing what they feel is direction received from their board. Others have been clumsy and disrespectful of our elected officials.

When he was mayor, Barry Brucker took hits from all sides on this issue even though he consistently opposed the high school, Constellation alignment.

Now it is Mayor Willie Brien's turn. We could not have found a better voice for our efforts. Dr. Brien has the respect of all the political, elected officials involved, from county to state to national. They trust him. They know he is a person of deep personal integrity and his voice will be heard.

So, the fight now goes from staff to Metro board, and we may be surprised to learn that we have some real allies there. Although Supervisor Zev Yaroslavsky is understandably disturbed by the wild allegations made against him and Metro, he is both rational and responsible. There are other board members, elected officials, who are listening too.

What really helped was Cong. Henry Waxman's cautionary letter to Metro insisting that safety of the school come first. If Metro loses Waxman, forget about fast-tracking federal funding.

Really want to get back to major issues such as why there are so many Sushi restaurants coming to Beverly Hills, but will try to sort out the first steps on the political process as the city and schools take this battle to the Metro board.

Final thought: Mayor Brien has reached out to the school board and they are working far more closely with the city in a shared mission. The new board majority is helping create a more collaborative effort, and that serves our whole community.

Brief notes: Good effort, to bring young professionals in Beverly Hills into public policy discussions. Under the leadership of Rotary President AJ Willmer, a new organization as a "satellite" to Rotary has been created, appealing to ages 20 to 40. Their next meeting on May 9 will hear from Dylan Conroy of Yellow Thunder Media discussing "Tying Social Media to Business." For more information, call Kerstin Leavitt at 310.288.1755.

A Kardashian has announced she wants to run for mayor of Glendale. I'm for anything that might take the family off the tubes, but some basic research might have helped. Glendale, as in Beverly Hills, does not have elections for mayor. We elect councilmembers who annually vote for mayor, almost always based on seniority.

Municipal governments do have challenges: Not sure if we actually paid the Kardashians' "nail polishing" bills submitted when they participated in our ill-fated 90210 gala.

Mike Wallace remembered and other delayed notes soon, including restaurant news, but not about our two Subway venues, ironically, one on Little Santa Monica Boulevard.

Absolutely final thought: If we stop bickering among ourselves and stop pointing accusing fingers at anyone who doesn't march to the same drummer, we might just win the route battle. Acting as adults could make our kids safer.

BULLETIN: By a split vote of 3 for, 1 against and 1 abstention, the Metro subcommittee on the Westside Subway Extension approved the staff report, which recommended tunneling under Beverly High, late Wednesday afternoon. The recommendation will be considered by the full board on April 26.

Brown to join Kaiserman as Beverly Vista PTA co-president

Alison Brown

Alison Brown was elected Tuesday morning as Beverly Vista executive vice president for the 2012-2013 school year.

Brown will be co-president with Rose Kaiserman, who took over the role of co-president after Noah Margo's election to the BHUSD Board of Education in November. Kaiserman was profiled in Beverly Hills Weekly Issue #641.

Brown, a 1989 Beverly High graduate, is also daughter-in-law of former Mayor Ed Brown. When asked if her father-in-law's public service influenced her involvement with the schools, Brown said, "I just really feel strongly about the schools and want to make a difference at [Beverly Vista]."

Brown said she and her husband Michael wanted their children Ethan, a fourth grader, and Arden, a second grader, to attend Beverly Hills schools like they did. Alison attended El Rodeo while Michael attended Hawthorne.

"It feels wonderful [to have our children in the district] and we're happy that they're following in our footsteps and that the school district is still as good as it is," Brown said.

Brown said her family was attracted to the district because of small class sizes, range of programs, enrichment classes, technology and great teachers and families.

Moving back to Beverly Hills also brought Brown's children into the same city as both sets of grandparents, including her parents Herb and Elaine Stein.

"It's a great support system," Brown said.

After graduating from UC Berkeley, Brown earned her law degree at Pepperdine University School of Law. Brown works as a part-time family lawyer in Century City.

"I'm really excited to help our school and make a difference," Brown said.

Public Works Commission dissatisfied with solid waste rate increase proposal

When HF&H Consultants recommended last week that the City raise the solid waste rates by 3 percent, the Public Works Commission was not prepared to accept the rate adjustment, said to reflect a cost-of-living increase.

"The commissioners would like to see [a lower rate], so we are actively working on a proposal for a smaller rate increase," Commission Chair Peter Foldvary said.

Although the City has a six-year contract with Crown Disposal, the proposed rate change reflects an increase in the City's administrative costs, vehicle maintenance and other costs related to trash collection, not an increase in the Crown Disposal contract, Foldvary said.

When asked if the Commission has a target percentage for the increase, Foldvary did not respond with a specific figure.

"The reason the consultants are engaged is so they can come up with a benchmark to say that with that increase things can be kept in the black. It's up to the city council eventually to try to improve that and the commission assists in that process looking at details before it gets to the city council," Foldvary said. "The 3 percent is by no means the final proposal to the city council."

BARBARA'S CAUSE

The Weekly's exclusive interview with Human Relations Commission Chair Barbara Linder

By Melanie Anderson

How did you get involved with the Human Relations Commission?

For about the past nine years, I have been volunteering every Monday at a program through All Saints' Church to help the homeless and the hungry who pass through our city. Through my work with the homeless I heard that the Human Relations Commission deals with issues of homelessness and vulnerable populations in Beverly Hills and that there was an opening. That's why I applied.

What I do with the commission interfaces with a lot of other issues that I deal with in the city, and now I go to a monthly coalition meeting, where all different organizations in Los Angeles and Beverly Hills get together around a table and discuss what's going on with the homeless and what to do about it and we all put our heads together.

My son [Jared] got me into [volunteering at All Saints' Church]. He was at Beverly High and he needed [to satisfy his] community service requirement. I started going with him because he didn't want to go by himself. I just fell in love with the program. The volunteers have become real friends and I think there's an endorphin rush when you see how the little bit you do makes a huge difference in people's lives.

What are your priorities this year for the commission?

We're working on a couple of very interesting projects. We [are giving] out a Civility Award and we have nomination forms in different venues all around the city. People who either live here, go to school here or work here can be nominated for this award. We look at [nominations] every month, and we're going to have a presentation at City Council to honor the people with the final Civility Award. We're waiting to get enough nominees back that we have a nice size pool to make a decision with.

Another project we're working on that is very exciting and very significant is that we are looking into different programs for bullying prevention, both bullying prevention in schools and bullying prevention amongst adults in order to promote civility. We're looking at different programs we can take part in for National Bullying Prevention Month, which is October. We're going to come up with a number of different activities and publicity and maybe a public service announcement. [We will] possibly have kids at the high school do short documentary videos about how they feel about prevention of bullying. We all went a few weeks ago and saw a preview of the movie Bully and that really motivated us. It was a very powerful movie.

The Human Relations Commission was formed as a settlement to a civil rights lawsuit in the early 2000s. Tell us about the Commission's accomplishments with respect to civil rights.

The most major one I can think of is that a former set of commissioners developed and established something the city calls CLASP, which is Changing Lives and Sharing Places. During the course of that process the commission helped the City re-do its vagrancy, loitering and panhandling laws so that the City came more in line with what current philosophies are on those issues. In other words, avoiding the NIMBYism of just shipping people off to another locale, and [creating] much more of a "Let's see how we can help people and get them out of this very vulnerable situation that they've gotten into." That was started before I came on the commission 3.5 years ago and I've seen it make progress every year since then. The City of Beverly Hills employs a CLASP team and usually it's two people who come to us from a social agency that's located in Los Angeles and they're in our city every weekday interfacing with people who may be on the street trying to get them help and encouraging them to seek

Part of what we do is help the seniors who live in our city, some of whom become tremendously vulnerable to abuse or through their own ill health being put out of their homes. Our staff who come to our meetings and advise us, they do tremendous amounts of work with that population and do so much to prevent them from losing their homes and preventing them from starving to death. Every time I go to the [City's] Community Services office, [City employees] Jim Latta and Julie Kahn are helping somebody with some of these issues. They provide advice and referrals. Many times they'll go visit people to see if there's anything they can do face to face.

Jim and Julie work so hard on all of the issues that I've mentioned. They do the real work because we only can advise, so a lot of times something will be said in a commission meeting that leads to hours and hours of work outside the commission meetings by the staff. [The City staff is] phenomenal. There's an intern in community services, Darryl Grama, and he comes now on Mondays to the program where we feed people at All Saints' Church. There's another young lady who has started working for the City recently, Jessica Emerson. She's going to help me with the demonstration garden at Greystone Mansion. [There's also] Steve Zoet, Nancy Hunt-Coffey, Cindy Brynan. They go 110 percent to support new ideas.

The Civility Statement is [also] something we accomplished. What we're doing this year is all under the umbrella of our Civility Statement and relates back to that. [The Civility Statement says:] The Human Relations Commission of the City of Beverly Hills strives to promote positive human relations in all aspects of community life. We invite every member of this community to support an environment where civility, respect and responsible actions prevail.

The Civility Statement is prominently placed at the front of Council Chambers. Do you think it has made a difference in conduct at City Council meetings?

I think that it is helping people to choose to be civil. People still have a choice and I know that emotions sometimes run very high. However, just to be presented with the choice I think is important.

Last year, the Commission was assigned to draft the City's noise ordinance, but the Commission was unable to come to consensus in terms of what time amplified sound should be cut off. Why was the noise ordinance such a challenging issue for the Commission and the community?

Firstly, we didn't draft it. That's something that the City does. What we were assigned to do was in our advisory position to reach out to the community and allow the residents of the community to express themselves on this issue. I think that we were all really surprised at how passionately residents felt about sound levels that occur in residential neighborhoods. Our function really was to allow a flow of ideas and opinions to be expressed so that the City could reach a very educated compromise on the issue, and that's exactly what we did. We were 100 percent successful in accomplishing a very challenging task that was delegated to us.

Why do you think it was such a challenging issue?

I think one of the reasons is because of how diverse our population is and that we have so many representatives of so many different cultures living within our city that we're still in a historical climate of getting used to each other. I think it's a phase and that America is a melting pot and eventually we will all adjust to each other, but it takes time.

What about the balance of the right to have social gatherings in your home versus quiet enjoyment of your home?

Those are two ideas that can be in conflict with each other and it was the job of City Hall to devise a compromise, and that's what happened.

Is the commission continuing to monitor the noise ordinance?

We weren't specifically advised to monitor it. However, we did want to be conscientious and we asked our police department liaison to come to us in March and to report to us on how it was going in terms of citations issued or number of calls the police [had received regarding noise issues]. The number of calls was way down, so as head commissioner, I felt very good about that. We're probably putting that away for now, and turning our attention to these other programs that we're working on.

Last summer, the City Council voted to reduce the size of the commission from seven members to five. Do you support this recommendation?

For our commission, yes. I think especially because we're advisory. I just don't think we need as many hands to do things.

You are the immediate past president of the Friends of the Library. What's new with this organization?

I had an idea that was so exciting that

I still haven't recovered from it, and I got the realization during a Human Relations Commission meeting. Nancy Hunt-Coffey had come in to give us a report on the [renovations] that they're doing at the library. She started talking about this new fairytale room they're building for the very youngest patrons of the library. I was listening to her and I said, "Why don't you call it the Enchanted Woods Room and have the Friends of the Library raise money to have some fantastic artwork established in the room?" For the past 30 years, the Friends of the Library has supported a collection for the children's department called the Enchanted Woods Collection, [which] is a collection of several hundred first-edition, hand-painted works for very young children by prominent authors. It's never really had a home. In conjunction with the contractor, the architect and Hunt-Coffey, we have been talking to different artists and I think we're coming close to finding an artist to paint a mural in the room. That's going to be a beautiful piece of original public art and the room is going to be two stories high. It's going to be so motivating to children to come in and have their first connection to literacy and reading be in this immersion atmosphere. We're going to continue to support and fund programs in the future in this room and hopefully get some special furniture and continue to support the collection, because the collection and programming are vitally important to what the Friends do.

We hear you have an edible garden in your front yard. Tell us about that.

I have gardened in the City since I was seven years old. The very first piece of corn I picked when I was seven years old just hooked me and I've had a garden ever since. At this house I didn't have any really good sun, so my garden was mostly in pots and planters. Then about a year and a half ago I was out in the front yard worrying about the water rates going up. I thought, why don't I get rid of the lawn and put in a garden? So I did, and the very first month that I was using a drip system instead of sprinklers, our water usage dropped by 40 percent. I established a goal for myself a year and a half ago of eating something from my garden every day of the year and I do it and most people I know are eating something from my garden every day, too.

Tell us about the proposal to start a community demonstration garden at Greystone Mansion.

That grew out of something else that happened on the commission about two years ago. The commission decided to help the City to participate in Big Sunday, a city-wide volunteer weekend. It usually happens the first weekend in May, and hundreds of different organizations all over the city participate and encourage all of their members to perform a community service on that day. We had some activity going on in our library on big Sunday a couple of years ago, and the next year Temple Emanuel called me and said, "What are you doing about Big Sunday this year?" We as a commission didn't have anything specific planned so I decided by myself to work with Temple Emanuel [to encourage the community to knit and crochet baby items for Temple Emanuel's Baby

Bundles collection]. Last year, the person from Temple Emanuel [said they wanted to do something outside]. I came up with the demonstration garden. Although that's not actually going to be occurring on Big Sunday, it's going to be a year-round community service project for anyone in the locale, not necessarily just Beverly Hills, who wants to participate. This is another idea that the city has been unbelievably supportive of. They are willing to rototill some property up at Greystone next to the greenhouse, put in [an irrigation] system, [and provide] compost. I've been reaching out to the community, gathering people together who love gardening and want to help. I'm very impressed with the number of people who are going to participate. On May 23, we're having our first organizational meeting at Greystone at 10 a.m. and we're going to decide exactly what we want to do and how. We're going to visit the site and make a final decision on whether it's going to go forward.

Tell us about your family.

I am the third in four generations in my family who have lived in Beverly Hills and [have] gone to school here. My grandfather [Benjamin Balos] built the third house that was built on Trenton Drive. My mom [Sherma Balos Frank] grew up and went to El Rodeo. I went to Beverly Vista and Beverly High. My two sons [Jared and Robert] went to Horace Mann and the high school. I got married in 1978. My husband [Mark] was my classmate at USC Law School. [Mark practices law related to] commercial business transactions and real estate.

[I'm no longer practicing law but I did] bankruptcy law. I was in-house counsel for a bank. I decided a long time ago that I could do a lot more good as a community activist.

My younger son [Jared] went to USC undergrad and is now in his second year of law school at Loyola. He also sings in a band called The Everyday Existents. My older son [Robert] is in his third year of getting his PhD at USC in molecular biology. They're both in the city for which I feel infinitely grateful. I'm very proud of both of my sons. My older son lives with his grandfather [Alan Frank, M.D.] very close by because that way my father doesn't have to be alone at night. He makes my dad feel very secure and they're both scientists, so they have a lot to discuss. I also have a brother who lives in the City, Andrew Frank. My oldest son and the garden at Greystone have motivated me to go back to school and get a Master of gardening certificate from UCLA Extension. I'm in the middle of that. It's so interesting learning about plant biology.

What's the highlight of serving on the commission?

The greatest thing about the commission for me has been the access that it has given me to meet all kinds of people that work with and for the City. The greatest thing about being the head commissioner this year is I get to go to the mayor's cabinet meetings and it's been fabulous to hear what's going on [with the] other commissions and interface with the other commissioners. A lot of [things they look at] are related to things that I work on and that's been really great.

been known to make an effort to get the best deals possible for the City. The Weekly reported in Issue #586 that the Commission's involvement in negotiations for the no-bid contract with Crown Disposal in December 2010 led to over $3.9 million in savings over the six-year life of the contract. Last month, the Commission formed a subcommittee—spearheaded by Vice Chair Joe Shooshani and Commissioner Barry Pressman—for fiscal responsibility that will look at areas the Commission can help with cost savings in the Public Works department.

The Commission continues to study a proposed increase in the City's water rates, Foldvary said.

"Every two years the Public Works department reviews its rate structure to see if any adjustments, i.e. raises, need to be made for the following year," Foldvary said. "This involves solid waste, water, and storm water and sewer [services]."

There will be no change in the rates of sewer and storm water services, Foldvary said, but the City is looking at an overall water rate increase of about 7 percent due to increased operating costs of the Municipal Water District, which supplies about 90 percent of the City's water. Foldvary pointed out consumers' water bills cover not only the water supply, but also the maintenance of MWD's infrastructure, including pipes, pumps, aqueducts, and reservoirs.

The Commission is still working on its recommendation to present to the City Council. The Commission will next discuss the water rates on May 10 at 8:30 a.m. The City Council is scheduled to hold a public hearing on the water rates May 15.

Horace Mann students learn about school's namesake in Boston

A group of Horace Mann students spent their spring break in Boston, where they visited the Massachusetts State House, which houses the Massachusetts General Court and the governor's offices. The State House also features a statue of Horace Mann, which has been standing since 1863.

Horace Mann was appointed Secretary of the Massachusetts State Board of Education in 1837 and is often referred to as the "father of public education." Mann founded and edited The Common School Journal, which presented education principles including that education is best provided when the school accepts children from all different backgrounds, that education should be free, that education should be non-sectarian, and that education should be taught by professional, well-trained teachers.

Adrian Spitz both had two hits, while Jared Forman, Zach Gaon and Mason each had one for Beverly Hills.

Oliver Yi pitched a complete game for the victory.

The Normans lost the second game, 8-5. Jared Forman drove in two runs and Laemmle, Mason and Reskin one each.

Grant Thompson went two-for-two for Beverly Hills, while Jared Forman, Laemmle, Mason, Reskin and Spitz each had one hit.

BHHS Softball Team Routs Morningside

Beverly High defeated Morningside, 17-0, in an Ocean League softball game March 27 at Beverly High, as Lexi Silbiger homered and drove in five runs and freshman Shyra Costas pitched a one-hitter in a game shortened to 4 1/2 innings because of the 10-run rule.

Silbiger homered during a four-run fourth inning, driving in Leah Shapiro, who singled.

Silbiger's ground out in the first also drove in Shapiro, who walked.

Silbiger's bases-loaded walk in the second forced in Kylie Colvin, the Normans' No. 9 hitter, who walked.

Silbiger singled in Shapiro, who singled and stole second during a six-run third inning.

Shapiro drove in three runs with her third- and fourth-inning singles.

Aamira Pandey's sacrifice bunt drove in Shapiro during a five-run second inning. Pandey singled in Silbiger in the third.

Colvin, Daniella Hay, Arianna Mazzarinni and Elena Rust had the Normans' other hits, all singles, while Colvin and Melissa Kolko had their other runs batted in.

Beverly Hills batters drew nine walks, with five of those batters later scoring.

Costas allowed a first inning single, struck out four and walked four.

A PETITION FOR PROBATE has been filed by Michael Carlson in the Superior Court of California, County of LOS ANGELES.

THE PETITION FOR PROBATE requests that Michael Carlson be appointed as personal representative to administer the estate of the decedent.

THE PETITION requests the decedent's will and codicils, if any, be admitted to probate. The will and any codicils are available for examination in the file kept by the court.

(This authority will allow the personal representative to take many actions without obtaining court approval. Before taking certain very important actions, however, the personal representative will be required to give notice to interested persons unless they have waived notice or consented to the proposed action.) The independent administration authority will be granted unless an interested person files an objection to the petition and shows good cause why the court should not grant the authority.

A HEARING on the petition will be held on April 27, 2012 at 9:00 AM in Dept. No. A located at 1725 Main St., Santa Monica, CA 90401.

IF YOU OBJECT to the granting of the petition, you should appear at the hearing and state your objections or file written objections with the court before the hearing. Your appearance may be in person or by your attorney.

IF YOU ARE A CREDITOR or a contingent creditor of the deceased, you must file your claim with the court and mail a copy to the personal representative appointed by the court within four months from the date of first issuance of letters as provided in Probate Code section 9100. The time for filing claims will not expire before four months from the hearing date noticed above.

YOU MAY EXAMINE the file kept by the court. If you are a person interested in the estate, you may file with the court a Request for Special Notice (form DE-154) of the filing of an inventory and appraisal of estate assets or of any petition or account as provided in Probate Code section 1250. You should also be aware that the lien being auctioned off may be a junior lien. If you are the highest bidder at the auction, you are or may be responsible for paying off all liens senior to the lien being auctioned off, before you can receive clear title to the property. You are encouraged to investigate the existence, priority, and size of outstanding liens that may exist on this property by contacting the county recorder's office or a title insurance company, either of which may charge you a fee for this information. If you consult either of these resources, you should be aware that the same lender may hold more than one mortgage or deed of trust on the property. NOTICE TO PROPERTY OWNER: The sale date shown on this notice of sale may be postponed one or more times by the mortgagee, beneficiary, trustee, or a court, pursuant to Section 2924g of the California Civil Code. The law requires that information about trustee sale postponements be made available to you and to the public, as a courtesy to those not present at the sale. If you wish to learn whether your sale date has been postponed, and, if applicable, the rescheduled time and date for the sale of this property, this information can be obtained from one of the following two companies: LPS Agency Sales & Posting at (714) 730-2727, or visit the Internet Web site www.lpsasap.com (Registration required to search for sale information) or Priority Posting & Publishing at (714) 573-1965 or visit the Internet Web site www.priorityposting.com (Click on the link for "Advanced Search" to search for sale information), using the Trustee Sale No. shown above. Information about postponements that are very short in duration or that occur close in time to the scheduled sale may not immediately be reflected in the telephone information or on the Internet Web site. The best way to verify postponement information is to attend the scheduled sale. P940897 4/19, 4/26, 05/03/2012
