“City Council race”

Although I will not have the chance to run for City Council due to an error with California DMV, I will voice my concerns and be a difference maker in Beverly Hills because I love and care about the future of our city. My main concern is education and we must continue to focus on that to make sure our students get the best quality of education possible. I am concerned about wasting money as was the case with spending $3 million on an initial plan for Roxbury Park that was later scrapped.

Beverly Hills*

Instead of a City surplus of $10 million, we could have had a surplus of $13 million. There is also the issue of fire prevention and roofs that has been going on for far too long. I believe that making the home owners of Beverly Hills put new fire resistant roofs on their homes was going way too far. It has been expensive and has hurt some financially. I do not believe that homes near Olympic Boulevard are in the same fire danger as those near Sunset Blvd. I believe that there is too much red tape in our laws to the point where it sometimes gets confusing to people and business. I am against Metro and their plans for a tunnel under Beverly High as many of you know.

Although I am not in the race, I support those who are. We must all work together to make sure the future of Beverly Hills is as great as its past.

City Council rejects involvement in hiring of City department heads

The City Council reached a consensus not to change the current process in regards to hiring City department heads and assistant deputy managers at the study session on Tuesday.

The City manager is currently in charge of hiring all department heads and assistant City managers. The item was discussed at the request of Vice Mayor John Mirisch who proposed the City Council be involved in the hiring process and suggested the council formalize collaboration with the City Manager.

“What I’m proposing is that we work within that existing form of government to be collaborative,” he said. “It’s not to try to take the City manager out of the decision making process but to include the council as representatives of residents in the process.”

City treasurer Eliot Finkel said blurring the lines of authority could lead to chaos in an organization.

“I think the residents are well represented by the people on the council as they should be. I think it’s difficult to hold our City manager responsible for employees he does not hire,” he said. “Our City manager must retain responsibility for his employees. If you’re not happy with his employees or his choices, get a new manager. You have that responsibility and authority to do it. If you're not happy with the selection process, ask him to change it."

Councilmember Lili Bosse felt the process City manager Jeff Kolin followed when hiring department heads was sufficient. Kolin said part of the process involved forming three panels consisting of various stakeholders in the community who would then recommend finalists.

"Knowing that we are including City councilmembers and we are including residents, commission members, staff members, you have three panels, it seems very fair and it also seems very transparent," said Bosse.

Councilmember Barry Brucker did not support changing the process.

"One of the concerns that I would have is if we had to adopt this policy where I think we'd find a major challenge was that if the council was not privy to the written application or didn't have the time to review all the written applications or be present to hear their oral interviews, I think it would put the candidates at a great disadvantage and wouldn't be fair to the process," he said.

Councilmember Julian Gold said he was content with the current process and did not see a reason to change it.

"If we like the process, we think it's so good then maybe we should formalize it, that way we would ensure having it forever," Mirisch said. "Now's actually probably the best time to making sure we have good forms of government. It's not just responding to a crisis its being proactive and making sure we all have a process which we all feel is good and which works."

Mayor Willie Brien also said he would not support changing the process.

"I think that we do regular reviews of the City manager because we meet with him every week and determine how he and his staff are working. I think the City manager has used interview panels and I think that if he changed that or veered from it for any reason, it is his authority to make this decision because there may be other ways that are equally as good or as effective," he said.

Delshad is featured on PBS Documentary, "The Iranian Americans"

Former Mayor Jimmy Delshad was featured in PBS's documentary, The Iranian Americans, which aired Tuesday night.

Delshad said he was approached to participate when he was mayor of Beverly Hills. The documentary wanted to discuss what life in America was like for those who had left Iran.

Jimmy Delshad

"They wanted a lot more information that I didn't have because I had left Iran before the revolution and they wanted to see what happened to people who came after the revolution," said Delshad.

He said though he could not speak about his own experiences, he could offer his perception of life in America for Iranians.

"For the first five to 10 years, the Iranians that came to U.S.-- I call it a suitcase mentality where they were ready with packed suitcases waiting for something to happen in Iran and the government [to] change and [they] would go back and live in our country again," he said.

This mentality was the reason they did not get involved in other aspects of American life and kept mainly to themselves, but once their children went to school here, they became Americanized, he said

"Finally, the parents realized that if they go back to Iran, the kids would remain here, so there is no way that they're going to go back, so they started making lives for themselves and getting involved in the community, in business and every aspect of the American business. They brought a lot of ingenuity, they brought a lot of wisdom, and a lot of culture and mostly they have been very successful people," he said.

Delshad called the experience "revealing" because it made him reflect on his personal life and when he became a U.S. citizen.

"I had to rethink about that feeling and how exciting it was the day you become a citizen and you mentally become American at that moment even though you don't lose your heritage," said Delshad.

The documentary will next air for Time Warner subscribers on Friday Dec. 21 at 9 p.m and Saturday at 6 a.m., 12 p.m., and 10:30 p.m. on channel 235.

City Council upholds plan modifications on 9900 Wilshire building

The City Council unanimously decided not to order a council review of project modifications that were approved by Susan Healy Keane, director of community development, regarding a mixed-use development at 9900 Wilshire Boulevard, formerly Robinsons May, at the study session Tuesday evening.

The project was originally approved in April 2008 and on Dec. 11, Keane approved an administrative modification through which the director of community development has the authority to approve changes to the plan that do not significantly change the distribution, location, extent or density of the uses and buildings permitted.

The proposed project revisions did not qualify for a formal plan amendment, which would have required Planning Commission review because there is no increase to the amount of residential or commercial area.

The proposed public garden was adjusted, but the total area and location remain unchanged. The building heights remain unchanged. The residential unit count remains 235 units but there was an increase in bedrooms, which required an increase of parking, according to the staff report.

The item was placed on the study session at the request of Vice Mayor John Mirisch, but the decision not to review the decision was unanimous.

"I don't believe there are significant differences between the two projects," said Councilmember Julian Gold. "I do note that there's a $7.6 million benefit over 30 years in the new project versus the old, in addition to all of the old dollars that were embedded in the plan so I'm comfortable leaving this as is and I would not favor calling it."

Mayor Willie Brien and Councilmembers Lili Bosse and Barry Brucker agreed with Gold.

Mirisch said he was also comfortable with the project, but did have concerns about the bulkiness of the proposed building under the new plan.

"I actually am comfortable with what this is. My one issue is the look of the building. I do think it's bulkier. I don't think it's attractive," he said. "I like the flat iron building but that will run its course going to the Architectural Commission and that aspect of it is something we can always look at later."

The plan includes public benefits to the City which includes $30 million, $3 million of which must be placed into an affordable housing fund, $1 million paid to the BHUSD, and $250,000 to the City's Fine Art fund, according to the staff report.

Planning Commission unanimously approves requests by Nespresso on North Beverly Drive

The Planning Commission unanimously approved an open air dining permit for Nespresso and a request for a waiver of four parking spaces associated with the open air dining at the commission's Dec. 13 meeting.

"It's going to be a beautiful store. It is high end merchandise which fits with business triangle's image [and] it is going to serve quality coffee and food in a very upscale setting," said Planning Commission Chair Craig Corman. "We just think it's going to be a great addition to the business triangle and help bring Beverly Drive back to where it should be."

Corman said there had been a number of vacancies on Beverly Drive and he thought this was a project that would attract people to the area. The Nespresso store which will be located at 320 N. Beverly Drive will be a retail store, which sells Nespresso machines and coffee and have a café area where people can eat meals and drink coffee.

Nespresso is a high end Swiss manufacturer which sells coffee machines and coffee products. The open air dining requires them to purchase 3.2 in-lieu parking spaces, which was rounded up to four.

Corman said he thought the applicant had requested the requirement be waived because

Yayoi Kusama's Hymn of Life: Tulips

Fine Arts Commission discusses fencing around "Hymn of Life: Tulips"

The Fine Arts Commission discussed the possibility of installing fencing around Yayoi Kusama's Hymn of Life: Tulips at their meeting on Dec. 11.

"It's a difficult subject because we don't like making things inaccessible," said Fine Arts Commission Chair Terri Smooke. "The idea is that the sculpture should be accessible and the "Do not climb" signs don't seem to be discouraging people. There was wear and tear on the work and we've just had it restored and we're trying to figure out what we can do to make sure that it stays safe."

Smooke said it has been difficult to get people to stay off the sculpture. She said that in the past the City has planted around the sculpture to discourage visitors from climbing through the plants to touch the sculpture, but it has not been effective enough.

"People have been approaching it as though it's a playground and it's not, so we are now going back to a discussion we had some time ago. We're revisiting putting some sort of physical barrier around the sculpture to prevent some of our overly enthusiastic visitors from getting on top of the sculpture or sitting inside or taking their pictures or things like that," she said.

Smooke said the commission is working on finding a barrier that will both protect the sculpture and not interfere with people's ability to look at the piece.

The commission also discussed the unveiling of the Jaume Plensa piece on Jan. 24 at 1 p.m.

"We are absolutely thrilled that Sotheby's has agreed to be the sponsor of the day of dedication," she said. "And they've been a very good friend and good neighbor and we very much appreciate them."

Smooke said the news of the sponsorship came the day after the meeting. She said she expects City councilmembers, all of the City commission members and Team Beverly Hills to be in attendance. She said they will also invite former members of the Fine Arts Commission. The commission will be unveiling the Plensa piece as well as the sculpture garden, which includes Roxy Paine's Erratic and Yayoi Kusama's Hymn of Life: Tulips.

the profit margins on the café portion of the store would not be large and the parking fees per space can be substantial.

"They're putting in large capital improvements into a business that can help revitalize the area, but their operating margins are not huge," he said.

Currently, the only place locally where one can purchase Nespresso coffee in the area is at the Nespresso boutique within the Century City Bloomingdale's, Corman said. Otherwise, the coffee would need to be purchased online.

"Williams-Sonoma sells the machines across the street but they don't sell the coffee, so this will be a place that people can actually buy the coffee, as well as the machines and sample the coffee in a very nice setting," he said.

The Planning Commission also continued a request for a development plan review of the construction of a new three-story commercial building on 207 S. Robertson Boulevard to January because there was an issue with noticing, said Corman. The radius to which the mail notice had been sent needed to be larger, so continuing the item gave residents who had not received the notice the ability to give input. Corman also said that a number of residents had spoken at the meeting largely against the proposed new three-story commercial building and continuing the item would allow residents who had shown interest in circulating a petition the opportunity to do so.

The commission had a discussion with City staff regarding establishing an administrative review process to determine substantial compliance with certain zoning code standards based on specific criteria prior to the meeting.

The Mayor's Task Force on Government Efficiency had recommended modifying the City's Zoning Ordinance to establish a process in which minor modifications to code requirements under certain circumstances could be approved. The Planning Commission decided the language needed to be modified to reflect changes commissioners had discussed with staff. Staff will bring new draft language back to the commission in January.

“We heard from a number of people who complained that sometimes when there would be very minor deviations from the code through no fault of their own, either because the way things were built, there was a slight overlap in the setbacks or things of that sort, that there was no discretion in the code for anyone to give them some relief,” he said. “The only solution would be to rip out or destroy a non-conforming structure or rebuild it.”

This proposed review process would allow the director of community development to decide whether or not leeway would be given.

This did not extend to floor area ratio or height, said Corman, but did extend to minor deviations like the placement of a wall. The details were still being discussed. Corman said there were also safeguards put in place to protect from people purposefully deviating from the code.

“The whole idea is just to give some flexibility in the building code, but we certainly want to keep the standards we have and those are the standards people should live by,” he said.

City Council accepts recommendation for retractable bollards on Crescent Drive

The City Council discussed installing retractable bollards on Crescent Drive between North and South Santa Monica Boulevard in order to facilitate street closures for events during the study session on Tuesday.

The council unanimously accepted staff’s recommendation for a manually operated counter weighted system that requires between 35 to 45 pounds of lifting to raise each bollard.

In July, the parking authority contracted Matt Construction for sign improvements around the Annenberg Center. The total cost of the bollard system including all traffic modifications are covered in the contract with Matt Construction. The contract allowance for the bollard system is $1 million, but Matt has secured subcontract costs not to exceed $640,000 and a contingency of $60,000, according to the staff report.

Staff also recommended installing a K12 bollard which can stop a vehicle that is traveling at 50 miles per hour.

“To be clear, the recommended bollard system is not intended to act as a high security barrier to prevent an intentional or malicious crash,” said Director of Project Administration Alan Schneider.

Vice Mayor John Mirisch and Councilmember Julian Gold, who are members of the Traffic and Parking Council liaison, both agreed with the recommendation.

“We’d spend a little bit extra money but have the additional safety,” said Mirisch. “We’d rather be safe than sorry in this case and think it makes sense.”

Councilmember Barry Brucker asked Schneider if they had looked into reflective coating so the bollards would be obvious at night and asked about signage that would notify drivers when the bollards were elevated.

Mayor Willie Brien suggested staff look into implementing arrows into the lighting system to notify drivers when the bollards

Yebris represent Persian Jewish community at White House Hanukkah Party

Sam and Leah Yebri met President Barack Obama and First Lady Michelle Obama at the annual White House Hanukkah celebration on Thursday Dec. 13. Yebri, who has worked with the White House on issues related to the Iran sanctions legislation and U.S.-Israel relations, was invited through the White House Jewish Outreach liaison.

“It was a remarkable experience to be in the White House and meet the president and first lady,” said Yebri. “I can’t help but think how my parents feel that after coming to the united states 30 years ago with a small child, that child had the opportunity to be invited to the White House and meet with the president.”

This was Sam Yebri’s second trip to the White House, but his first time meeting the president. He previously attended President Obama’s signing of the Iran sanctions legislation in 2010.

Yebri is the president of 30 YEARS AFTER, an organization that promotes the participation of Iranian-American Jews in American civic life and enhances the involvement and integration of Iranian-American Jews in the greater American Jewish community.

Church and State in Beverly Hills

Early notes on candidates

By Rudy Cole

I have absolutely no problem with friends wishing each other Merry Christmas in my presence, even though the politically correct, "Happy Holidays," is a often a self conscious extension of uncomfortable communication.

Just don't make any single religious practice part of school programs, or used for any ritual or display on public property, and, of course, there are other subtleties and nuances. But Thomas Jefferson and his first amendment zealots worked too hard to assure that there would be no establishment of religion in America for us not to be vigilant of any possible abuse.

Of course, the frequent legal challenges to religious displays on public lands often surfaces at this time of the year, as it did in Santa Monica with that city's council ruling that the Nativity Scene could not be placed on city property.

Beverly Hills had its own variation of this divisive issue almost 20 years ago when Chabad installed a mammoth Menorah in Beverly Gardens. Chabad, aside from its messianic orthodoxy, does some fine work all over the world in such areas as drug use intervention.

But Chabad was determined not to permit Beverly Hills to remove the Menorah even when the City faced a costly legal challenge filed by more broadly based Jewish groups, including the American Jewish Congress. In a sense, this became an internal community conflict with the then city council caught in between.

There were some court test guidelines the city attorney said could be followed. The Chabad Menorah could legally remain if it was also dismantled each evening. The test was permanence. Of course, that was too costly and cumbersome to achieve. But Chabad found another tool: If the Menorah could not be kept in the park overnight, the art show, "Affair in the Garden" should also be forced to remove any overnight works.

Most artists worked around this challenge, but our semi-annual show did lose some valuable exhibits. As the chair of the Recreation and Parks Commission, I told Chabad lawyers and leaders that all of this was very mean spirited, and not likely to win friends in the community. But who listens to me?

I do have some personal history with the separation issue. In my freshman year at Fostoria (Ohio) High School, I was excused from homeroom almost every Friday when a Protestant clergyman arrived to lead a prayer session, and I was far from being alone. All Catholics, Seventh Day Adventists and followers of other even more esoteric callings, were assigned to the school library during the service, and I did not in any way feel victimized. No, I totally enjoyed the private peeks at National Geographic with some delightful art on aboriginal women's torsos in the pre-Playboy years.

However, there were hurts, especially among my Catholic classmates. Since Fostoria was home to a popular Catholic school, those Catholic kids felt shame: not being at St. Wendlin probably meant their parents could not afford the tuition.

Fostoria, although far from liberated, had more obvious separation issues. We did not have sufficient black students for separate schools, but would you believe that in each class they sat slightly apart from other students? How I knew to detest this form of racism puzzled even my liberal minded parents.

Big party at the fire station Wednesday afternoon for retiring deputy fire chief Mark Embrey, who made a strong mark on our community during his decades of service.

Earlier Tuesday, Embrey was honored by Mayor Willie Brien and the whole council and received a standing ovation from his colleagues in the audience.

Chief Tim Scranton delivered a warm appreciation for Mark's service to the City and the department and there was something very special in how much Mark said he appreciated his ability to serve Beverly Hills, a community he so clearly loved.

He will very much be missed, but his legacy lives though the people in the department he trained and who will have a hard act to follow. Yes, there is a very special relationship between those who serve us in government and our community.

Of course, since it was Janet Salter, it had to be the party of the year -- her birthday bash at Hillcrest (see picture on page 2). Top leaders in the arts and professions, elected officials and business types mingled with her large extended family at a very warm event. Far too many names to print but think top A list and long time friends.

Naturally, the mammoth dining room was also filled with the larger than life memory of the late Mayor Maxwell Hillary Salter, someone I can never forget.

I probably told the story before, but when I was co-managing Max's first campaign for city council -- and it was never a slam dunk -- I tried hard to convince the whole family not to call their beloved leader "Sonny." I argued, with only mild success, that those elected to the council would be called "city fathers" and that "Sonny" simply did not fit that moniker.

The campaign kickoff was a huge success -- large crowd and important civic leaders, and each speaker had accepted my request that the candidate be called Maxwell or Max, not Sonny. (Historical note: Salter's middle name was "Hillary" but he always pointed out he had it first.)

Finally, it was Salter's time to thank participants, guests and organizers, which he did with his consistent good humor and warmth, when Janet suddenly interrupted: "SONNY, YOU FORGOT TO THANK THE RABBI'S WIFE." So much for managerial influence.

The election had another historical side note: Salter, who was pro-Four Seasons and Robert K. Tanenbaum who had opposed the project, both won, leading a strong field with other competing options.

In the past, who signed council candidates nominating papers made big news: not this year, but there were some interesting inclusions worth noting:

Although signing nomination papers is clearly an endorsement, later backings by petition signers could also happen. But as of now, the only candidate with Lili Bosse's signature was John Mirisch. (This did not deter Bosse from joining the opposition to a Mirisch "reform" proposal at Tuesday's study session -- more on John's ideas later but Bosse is one independent lady legislator.)

Back to important endorsements. If there is disunity on the subway route issue between the schools and the City, it did not prevent newly elected school President Jake Manaster from giving his name to Dr. Willie Brien. He also endorsed Planning Commission vice chair Brian Rosenstein.

Other board members signing for Mirisch were Noah Margo, Dr. Brian Goldberg and Lisa Korbatov.

Nancy Krasne and Rosenstein both had impressive petition signers -- Brian heavy on "establishment" types, and we mean that in a good way, and former Mayor Krasne gathering signatures from people who are often on different sides on community issues, and that too is very positive.

Although it is almost impossible to make sure that every endorser's signature is done right and is a registered voter, the major candidates all did well, with Mirisch, Rosenstein and Krasne only failing on one name each, and providing ten more each than needed. Who was perfect: Mayor Dr. Willie Brien, a whiz on detail.

One late filer almost did not qualify: with most candidates submitting far more than the minimum, attorney Cohan's first visit to city clerk Byron Pope found one short of the minimum. Cohan scurried out to secure the one more name she needed.

Correction fyi. Cohan is a well known theatrical name, and one usually identified with the great Irish entertainer, George M. Cohan. When working under deadline last week, I said that there were "no" Persian candidates on the ballot, I was mistaken. Turns out this Cohan is Iranian as is another contender, Michael Talei.

Council side notes: If he wins a second term, Mirisch would, by tradition and seniority, be selected as our next mayor with Lili Bosse as vice mayor. Hard not to notice how steady and unflappable the work of Councilmember Dr. Julian Gold is -- always calm, rational and balanced, even when there are sharp differences all around him. Unity? Barry Brucker was the first to sign Dr. Brien's nominating petition.

Congratulations to all for filing and to Eliot Finkel who is running for reelection as Treasurer without opposition.

Testing on iconic Beverly High Building B to determine preservation efforts

Beverly High's Building B will undergo testing over winter break to determine whether the building can be preserved, according to BHUSD consultant Tim Buresh.

"They put a layer of concrete inside the wall in the 1930s and we want to confirm the actual strength of that and whether reinforcement was put in correctly and the condition of that reinforcement to verify that it's still okay," Buresh said. "And if all those are positive, then it may well be practical to save big portions of building B."

Buresh said there is a strong interest in preserving the building pending the findings. Buresh expects decisions to quickly follow the results of the testing. He said they will need to confirm the strength of upgrades made in the 1930's.

The destructive testing will be done on the shear and support walls to see if they can support adequate renovation, according to Board President Jake Manaster.

The testing will occur over the winter break as to not interrupt students.

Buresh also said the Board of Education had discussed whether the swim gym will still be used as both an indoor pool and a gym simultaneously.

The pool in the swim gym is not a CIF regulation pool and cannot be used for athletic meets. He also said operating the pool within the gym is difficult.

"On the other hand, the gym, by adding seating on all four sides, is a really good competitive gym space for volleyball and basketball so I think there's a strong interest in preserving that. It's kind of unique in a special way compared to most other gyms where you just have one side or maybe two sides [of seating]," he said.

Buresh said the structure of the swim gym is "surprisingly robust," and though there has not yet been a formal decision, he did not expect any argument in favor of demolishing the building.

Manaster said the idea of the building not being a swim gym did not make sense and that there was not support for removing the gym's

General Manager of Saks Fifth Avenue

How long have you worked as the General Manager of Saks?

I've been with Saks Fifth Avenue for 19 years. I've been in Beverly Hills as vice president and general manager for about two and a half years.

What exactly does a General Manager of a store do?

Hence the title, it's a generalist. I am responsible for every aspect of our facility here in Beverly Hills.

What positions have you held in the past?

I was vice president and general manager of merchandising for our New York store in Manhattan previous to this position. Before that, I was in Michigan Avenue as an assistant general manager. I ran the Highland Park store as general manager outside of Chicago and before that I was a group manager and a designer manager, designer-sportswear couture manager in our Chevy Chase store on the east coast.

Where does most of your clientele come from?

Beverly Hills [and] our surrounding radius, about 10-20 miles. We're a great, iconic store here in Beverly Hills for everyone who visits Los Angeles and Beverly Hills, but really we're a local store. You know we've been here since 1938.

Right, Saks is the oldest of the department stores in Beverly Hills.

Correct. We have generations that have shopped with us of families in Los Angeles and Beverly Hills, so it's very special.

How much benefit do you get from tourism?

I would say the rest of our business. It's such a destination city and in between Wilshire and Rodeo, it's definitely an experience that customers who travel here domestically or internationally want to experience.

What sets Saks apart from the other department stores in the City?

Customer service. I think we have long service associates here who have great relationships with our customers and I think it's just a very special situation.

How do you compete with the Beverly Center and Century City Mall?

I think that's a totally different experience this allows us to stay in touch with them," he said.

The commission discussed ways to make it easier for people to put up signs so they know exactly what is expected of them and so they receive more consistent responses when applying for approval. If a request appears before the commission, the person has to pay a fee, so Rubins said the initiatives would be more business friendly in that it would potentially save applicants money while allowing the commission to maintain oversight and see that certain expectations were being met.

Rubins said the requirements were still being worked out by the commission but once they are implemented, they will be monitored by the commission over a period of six months.

He said that holding the retreats regularly gives the commission the opportunity to stop and look at the sign approvals and keep the dynamic of the commission going.

They also discussed tracking project approvals so they are able to ensure that what is approved by the commission is what is built.

"What we're looking to ensure is that everybody does do what is expected of them," Rubins said.

for customers. When a customer chooses to go to a mall, they're generally on a mission. I think people come to us for service, for exclusive merchandise, one of a kind merchandise, and experience and that's what we offer.

Did you see a large Black Friday turn out?

Oh yeah, we had a great black Friday. Black Friday is always fun.

What plans does Saks have for the holiday season?

We're here for everybody's holiday needs. The building looks beautiful, our windows are exquisite, we have great gift items and great things for people who want to buy things for themselves. It's just an amazing luxury experience here.

You are one of three department stores in the City. Would it help if we had more department stores around us?

Competition is always healthy. I think that every retailer looks at the market individually and whether they belong in that market or not. I think we're pretty secure having been here since 1938 and our reputation speaks for itself. We're very proud of that. We're also developing some things that set us apart from the competition such as currently, we're renovating our men's store, which will open between February and March.

Do you have anything special planned for the 75th anniversary?

No, we're just kind of letting it speak for itself. I think we're going to somehow mix it in to our official re-grand opening of our men's store. I think it's kind of a celebration for our loyal customers and people who have long standing relationships with us.

You said previously you worked in New York. How is it different from Beverly Hills?

Our New York store, I used to say, it's a city itself within a city. It's a massive facility and such a fun experience for our customers. You know, here we really have the opportunity in Beverly Hills to get to know our customers, to know their families, to know their needs and their wishes and wants. I will say that my favorite thing about the Beverly Hills customer is that they love fashion. They're extremely passionate about fashion and having the latest. It makes it very unique.

Tell us about your family.

My family lives in Fort Worth, Texas. I'm the only member of my family that does not live there, but my love of fashion took me away to New York City. I return often three to four times a year. My parents are still there with my three sisters and I have a very large extended family. I have nine nieces and one nephew and they're great.

How did you get into the fashion industry?

I love clothes since an early age, but really, from the outside looking in, it was the world of glamour and fashion. My favorite thing about the fashion industry is every day is a new day, it's a new experience, your to-do list never matters because it's always changing. That's what attracted me to it. I chose the industry, that's what I like to say. A lot of people kind of fall into it or they skirt around it. I was fascinated from the time I chose the career. It's something that I truly love and am passionate about.

What was it about Saks specifically that made you want to work there?

I've grown up at the company. I always say that we're so iconic and it's such an amazing privilege to work here. Something outsiders may not know is that Saks Fifth Avenue is really a family. We're really united and we treat each other and we treat all of our associates with kindness. That's really my favorite part about the company.

use as a pool.

Though formal decisions have not been made, Manaster said there were plans of installing a competition pool and the swim gym would be useful as practice space and other functions. Manaster also said the board had given staff direction to accept bids to properly ventilate the swim gym, which is not currently up to standard.

Architectural Commission discusses streamlining sign approvals at retreat

The Architectural Commission held a retreat on Dec. 11 to discuss initiatives, which included streamlining sign approvals. Chair Zale Richard Rubins said it was the first retreat held by the commission and he has asked that the commission hold the retreat twice a year to increase communication between the staff and the City.

"By having these retreats, the desire is to have our city council representative there, staff there, so that there could be dialogue because as the city council changes and issues come before it, they may want some different kind of responses from their commissions and

Snack Bar coming to La Cienega Park

The Delicious Snack Company, a full service snack bar, will open at La Cienega Park at the beginning of next year.

Dean Joffe, the snack bar owner, grew up in Beverly Hills and expects the bar, which will be adjacent to the ball fields and next to the playground, to open in January, he said.

The bar will sell burgers, hot dogs, pizza, and popcorn but also feature alternative healthy options like salads, turkey dogs, and vegetarian burgers.

"We're basically an American fare snack shop in the park, but we understand what the consumer in the area wants," he said. "We also keep some kosher already-packaged products."

Joffe said he's been working with the City for about 18 months to get the snack bar running.

"I personally wanted to do it because I grew up on the backside of Roxbury on a street called Hillgreen. I pretty much spent my days just playing at Roxbury Park after school, in fact that was the hub of everything that we did, so I know aside from some vending machines there were never any options really at any of these parks," he said.

The grand opening date depends on how quickly the health department approves permits for the snack bar, but he said he hopes the snack bar will be running early January of 2013.

Cheryl Saban reflects on her term as a U.N. public delegate

Cheryl Saban

Beverly Hills resident Cheryl Saban concluded her term as a U.S. public delegate to the United Nations General Assembly last week.

"It has been a really interesting experience, I have to say," she said. "I'm glad I didn't come here with an expectation because I wouldn't have known what to expect."

BEST FRIENDS ARE SO "CHOCOLATE BAR"

Six-year-old author Dylan Siegel writes a book to find a cure for his best friend's rare disease

By Andrea Aldana

Seven-year-old Jonah Pournazarian was born with Glycogen Storage Disease 1b, a liver disease that affects one in a million children for which there is no cure.

His best friend, six-year-old Dylan Siegel, decided to write a book, which he would sell to raise money for a cure. The result was Chocolate Bar which in less than two months has raised $25,000.

A sample page of his book reads, "I like to go to the beach. That is so chocolate bar."

Chocolate Bar is Dylan's phrase for "awesome."

Dylan and Jonah who are both Beverly Hills residents and students at Stephen S. Wise Temple School met in pre-school. This year, they were placed in the same class and one day following a play date Dylan told his mother, Debra Siegel, that he wanted to make a contribution to Jonah's fund.

"I was putting Dylan to bed that night and he said 'I'm going to write a book and sell a book and give Jonah all the money for his charity,' so he started coming up with all these ideas," said Debra Siegel.

Since he was going to bed, she thought he would forget about it, she said. The next day he came home from school and sat down and wrote Chocolate Bar.

When he finished, he went up to his mom and said: "Okay mom will you go make copies now?"

"We at first weren't really sure what to do with it, but [Dylan] was so persistent that he just kept going and going and going and saying 'you got to print this, I want to take it to school and sell it, please please please,'" said David Siegel. "So we got the book laid out and made some copies of it and at his Mitzvah Day at Stephen S. Wise, we had an opportunity to sell the books, [and] Dylan and Jonah sat at the table for a couple of hours and without even taking a break just sold their hearts out and signed autographs and took pictures with people and between the Whole Foods chocolate bars that were donated and the books, they sold over $6,000 in one day. That was the first day they were selling."

That day they sold out of all the copies that they had available and in less than two months raised about $20,000 dollars leading up to a book signing event at Barnes and Noble at the Grove on

Sunday, Dec. 14 where they raised close to an additional $5,000. The book sells for $20, but Lora Moradi Pournazarian, a Hawthorne and Beverly High graduate, said that many people have donated more than that.

"It was basically a book signing, and I laugh because it's just so cute that a six-year-old had a book signing," said Rabin Pournazarian, Jonah's father.

About 200 people attended the event where both Dylan and Jonah signed books and answered questions. The event included a performance by the Stephen S. Wise Temple School choir and Dylan read his book.

Jonah was diagnosed with the disease when he was about six months old. GSD 1b is a liver disease, where the liver is missing an enzyme, so Jonah must eat every three hours so his blood sugar does not fall. He is also missing neutrophils in his white blood count, so he does not have the ability to fight off infections.

He wears a gastrointestinal tube through which he eats most of his meals and is on a restrictive diet where he cannot eat sugar, fruit or dairy products.

"When Jonah was diagnosed here, the doctor said, 'Your son is never going to be normal, he is never going to play soccer, he's never going to be like his twin brother [Eli], he's never going to be able to go to birthday parties,'" said Lora.

She called David Weinstein, a physician in Gainesville, FL., who reassured her Jonah was going to be normal. The Pournazarians created a fund for Jonah about six years ago and every year they fundraise to find a cure for GSD 1b. The money is sent to the University of Florida, and Weinstein uses the funds to conduct research. She said her son just completed an AYSO soccer season and is going to play in the Beverly Hills Basketball league.

"Our fundraising is usually limited to sending an email to friends and family and raising money and this year, we just had this amazing idea of this book," said Rabin.

Rabin said 100 percent of the proceeds go to Florida.

"I pay for these books out of pocket, the chocolate bars are donated, the wrappers are donated, the t-shirts we were wearing [Sunday] that were really beautiful were donated and it's really a grassroots effort to raise the million dollars and I really try hard to cover expenses myself, and obviously David helps as well because we want literally every dime to go to Florida," said Rabin.

Dylan's goal is to raise $1 million for Jonah's fund, but as his father, David said: "why stop there?"

"We want to find a cure, we're close enough to know that we could and after our cure is found because it's the liver, the doctor believes it will help with a whole lot of other liver diseases," said Lora.

Debra said she and her husband David were so passionate about the project not only because it would help Jonah, but because it would also empower children.

"It's letting other kids know that they have power and their ideas mean something and can do something big. We also want kids to know what they're capable of," said Debra.

In addition to hosting the book fair, Barnes and Noble provided a voucher that can be used at checkout, so a portion of Barnes and Noble purchases goes back to Jonah's Fund. Today, Dec. 20 is the last day to use the voucher. For more information, go to www.facebook.com/chocolatebarbook.

"It was basically a book signing, and I laugh because it's just so cute that a six-year-old had a book signing."

Saban, who was nominated by Hilary Clinton and has been living in New York City for the past few months, said her role as a delegate has been to observe and attend meetings on a variety of topics ranging from autism, entrepreneurship, human rights and the status of women.

"Being a public delegate during this season was probably a little more unique than other years. Right from the get-go, there were huge global issues happening all over the world," she said.

Saban sat in on various conversations in the General Assembly that included conflicts in Benghazi, Gaza, Mali, Rwanda and Syria. As a delegate she was able to come in contact with several branches of the United Nations, including U.N. Women, headed by Michelle Bachelet and second-in-command Lakshmi Puri.

ARE OUR SCHOOL CHILDREN SAFE?

Beverly Hills officials say they're prepared to take on any emergency

By Andrea Aldana

In the wake of the Sandy Hook elementary school tragedy, Beverly Hills Police Chief David Snowden, Superintendent Gary Woods, and Mayor Willie Brien held a press briefing Tuesday morning to discuss school and City safety initiatives.

The briefing came after Friday's tragedy in Newton, Conn. where an armed man killed 20 children and six adults at Sandy Hook Elementary School.

On Monday, Dec. 17, Snowden, Woods and all the principals in the BHUSD as well as principals of the private schools in the City met to review safety plans. Snowden said they are constantly reviewing the plans.

"It's not something that sits in our drawer," Snowden said.

According to Woods, the schools routinely practice drills in preparation for an emergency and he feels very confident in them. The drills usually take place once a month and can sometimes be more frequent.

"We take scenarios whether it's an active shooter, whether it's a fire, or something of that sort and teachers have to adjust for the scenario, so we have a drill and we usually provide feedback later on, so we evaluate how we did," he said.

The plans are designed by the police department, who is also in constant training, according to Snowden.

"We play out all kinds of scenarios. Pretty much everything you could imagine that could befall our city, we practice. So the City is very well prepared, probably more than most, to deal with these types of situations and I can't emphasize enough how strongly I feel that we are safe," Snowden said.

The average response time for an emergency is about 2.7 minutes and BHPD has mutual aid agreements with the City of Los Angeles. The Beverly Hills SWAT team trains with the Los Angeles County Sheriff's department, the LAPD, and Culver City and Santa Monica, said Capt. Tony Lee.

"We truly have a unique situation in Beverly Hills. We're a small community in terms of the size of the City," said Brien. "You've heard our police response time is about 2.7 minutes, I can assure you and I think the chief will agree, if there was a major incident at our schools, you would see that first vehicle rolling in far, far faster than 2.7 minutes."

Snowden said that two volunteer members of DCS, the disaster communication system, are at all of the schools at all times with radios that communicate with the department's communication staff.

Mayor Willie Brien said DCS was extremely important and suggested that maybe the department needed to be expanded with more than two people to ensure more regions of the campus would be covered and to ensure that any suspicious person be reported right away.

The security staff at the schools also has direct communication to the department.

"I think it's really important for us to be a bit more aware of what goes on outside of our borders and that's another big part of what I've learned here. It is not just our perspective; it is understanding other perspectives and being able to discuss what we think [and] bringing our perspective to that in a civil way," she said.

Saban is the founder of the non-profit Women's Self Worth Foundation, which provides grants to organizations that work toward the empowerment and advancement of women. Saban also serves on a number of boards, including The Saban Research Institute, Girls Inc. and Children's Hospital Los Angeles.

"The school security staff has our radio frequencies and we have theirs so we can communicate directly to them so as officers are responding, they can get information disseminated to them as they are responding and our plans are such that we can handle a response to any location at the school no matter where it is," said BHPD Lieutenant Joe Chirillo.

A few years ago, Chirillo recommended to the Board of Education that they number the buildings and the classrooms, so that first responders would be able to know where the incident took place. He also recommended they renumber some classrooms.

"They renumbered the classrooms and the buildings and that makes it easy for someone who is in the building to be able to communicate where they're at, like 'I'm in building A room 222 and then we would know exactly where they're at,'" said Chirillo. "It facilitates locating people in a time when they're stressed out."

Chirillo was previously the Crime Prevention Sergeant, who supervised school resource officers, who conducted lock down drills.

Snowden could not directly share specifics of the safety plans because they do not necessarily want people on the outside to know what they do in certain situations.

"What I can assure you is, we just want to make sure that all new teachers, all new principals are up to speed, and I think that's where the fine tuning comes in because everything else is pretty much in line," he said.

Woods said the district can have turnover from day to day in terms of substitute teachers, aids, custodians, playground assistants.

"That would be our challenge, making sure that they're all up to speed," he said.

Snowden said that parents in the community constantly ask why the schools do not have school resource officers.

"We made a very conscious change in our strategy a couple of years ago and we feel very strongly that the number of bodies on the street respond to the needs of the schools better than an SRO program," he said.

Snowden said children in the schools are safer in the current program than they were in the SRO program. He said SRO programs cause a false sense of security.

"When we did our check, we found that during most of the emergency calls that the SRO was not available, responded late, all of those things where we don't have that problem with a responding police officer or someone that walks through the campus on a daily basis," he said.

He said that the current program eliminates complacency.

"I don't care what your occupation is, if you do it long enough without having to respond the way you're supposed to respond, you become complacent," Snowden said. "We don't have that problem with our patrol officers, patrolling the streets or walking through the schools. They do it with an awareness that at any given second, something terrible could happen and they want to be prepared for that."

Since Friday's incident, the BHPD has heightened patrol around the school campuses. Snowden said the department patrols the schools on a daily basis and the heightened patrol was not because they feared a similar incident, but so that parents would feel safer sending their children to school.

Snowden and Brien also noted that most of the Fire Department and Police Department are parents themselves and make the children's safety their top priority.

"We want to recognize as the chief said, we're all parents, and our hearts go out to the people in Newton, Conn., their families, their community for the horrific event that they had to endure and will endure for the rest of their lives so we all just wanted to send our best thoughts and prayers," said Brien.

The Beverly Hills City Council read the names of all the victims in Friday's shooting at the City Council meeting on Tuesday night, which was followed by a moment of silence.

Mirisch said it would make the process more transparent.

"An independent analysis which would be available to the public would in some way make it very clear what the impacts are and what we're getting into," said Mirisch. "We do not have independent analysis now and we do not bring it to the public to allow them to have a voice and as to whether the deals we're making make sense or don't."

Councilmember Lili Bosse said she felt the only main difference between the proposed ordinance and the practice of the City would be to make negotiations that were taken off the table public. She said she felt this was prob-

City Council rejects Mirisch's request for Civic Openness in Negotiations

The City Council discussed establishing an ordinance loosely based on Costa Mesa's Civic Openness in Negotiations Tuesday evening.

The ordinance which was discussed at the request of Vice Mayor John Mirisch would provide an independent economic analysis and the fiscal impacts of negotiations with City employee bargaining units, would make offers that are taken off the table in negotiations public, and would not allow the memorandum of understanding to be approved in one meeting so the public could be more involved.

every country that gave a speech in the first couple of weeks, mentioned that they were doing something for the empowerment of women, raising the status of women and trying to tackle the issue of violence against women," she said.

Saban said conversations revolving around women interested her the most. When she returns to Beverly Hills, she hopes to be a champion for U.N. Women and teach others about the programs and research done by the branch. Her term is a year long, but she was only living in New York City while the General Assembly was in session. She said other aspects of her role for the remainder of the year were to be determined.

Broadway on tour

Students from the fall afterschool session of “A Taste of Broadway” performed at the Salter Theater at the Beverly High on Dec. 17 and 18. Students from all four schools participated in “Broadway on Tour” singing songs from Grease, Hello Dolly, Wicked, Mamma Mia, Man of La Mancha and more. It was directed, choreographed and written by Jenny Gordon with accompanist/pianist, Lloyd Cooper.

Student performers included Lauren Aviram, Elisheva Azerad, Tiffany Bahari, Isaiah Berke, Mia Bermudas, Gabriella Bina, James Blauvelt, Marina Buendia, Isabella Cantu-Buck, Stephanie Choa, Kathleen Choe, Audrey Cmar, Adora Dayani, Mia De Castro Basto, Shaya Douek, Celine Emein, Candice Emrani, Noura Enaya, Taylor Fuchs, Zoe Gale, Amy Geller, Adrianna Goldman, Vanessa Goldman, Malea Hayles, Becca Heller, Bronte Henfling, Madeline Hodor, Ryan Hodor, Ben Holtzman, Angelina Izzet, Hannah Khorrani, Leila Khorrani, Rachel Kim, Daniel Kohanbash, Addison Kreshek, Alexa Kreshek, Nolan Krutonog, Karol Kwiatkowski, Taylor LaVan-Asla, Sarah Lepkowitz, Antonio Logan, Elizabeth Loranger, Charlotte Lyon-Petrovic, Chloe Makabeh, Chloe Malik-MacDonald, Alessandra Maresca, Emma Maurer, Naomi Mayzels, Adriana Medina-Santiago, Maya Mejia, Georgia Minami, Alexia Moshirfatemi, Eli Okum, Stephanie Ortiz, Isabela Painter, Lisa Park, Rachel Philips, Nikki Pourebrahim, Leo Ramos-Vergara, Natalie Ramos-Vergara, Estella Rosen, Melina Rosen, Chloe Rebibo, Dona Rebibo, Benni Safchik, Taylor Shabaniyan, Casey Simpson, Jessica Smiler, Isaac Solouk, Elnaz Soumikh, Angelina Soyferman, Manuela Torres, Hunter Trost, Noelle Trost, Sarah Yadianian, and Matthew Zebrowski.

lematic because parts of negotiations that are taken off the table can be later reintroduced.

City attorney Larry Wiener said it might be difficult to determine when something would be off the table.

Councilmember Barry Brucker said releasing negotiations that are off the table would put the community at a disadvantage because they may not understand the complete context of what is being rejected and would promote uninformed comments.

Mirisch said negotiations affect the budget in a massive way and it is something the residents should be involved in.

“Anything that we do and try and get more public feedback and comment is something that is again very good government. The suggestion that the proposal of providing more information and getting more public input, the suggestion that that should in some way be divisive is nothing short of ludicrous,” said Mirisch. “However, it does indicate a philosophical difference on what government should be about. Should it be inclusive for the people or should it be an insider’s club?”

Brien said the council receives economic reviews as negotiations take place and whether it was independent or not was not as important as it being factual and that reporting all negotiations would be stifling for current and future negotiations. He agreed with making an effort to inform the public once an agreement was reached, but did not support moving the ordinance forward.

Bosse said she would support an economic analysis and better informing the public when negotiations were completed and supported moving the ordinance forward without making public the negotiations taken off the table. Gold, Brien and Brucker did not support readdressing the ordinance.

BHHS Boys’ Basketball Team Goes 3-1 in Tournament

The Beverly High boys’ basketball team defeated View Park, 51-41, in the fifth-place game of the 71st annual Beverly Hills High School Basketball Tournament Saturday at the Swim-Gym, outscoring the Knights, 15-2, over the final three minutes, 31 seconds.

Justin Ifekwunigwe’s basket and two free throws concluded a 9-0 run that gave the Normans (3-2) a 45-39 lead with 53 seconds remaining.

Brandon Williams’ basket 12 seconds later ended that run, but Beverly Hills responded by scoring the final six points.

Ifekwunigwe, who coach Jarvis Turner said began attending class at Beverly High Nov. 26 after transferring from Sierra Canyon, scored a game-high 24 points, including 12 in the fourth quarter, when he made two 3-point baskets and all four of his free throws.

Ifekwunigwe, a 5-foot-8-inch senior guard, also made a 3-point basket in both the first and second quarters.

The Beverly Hills City Council recognized retiring deputy fire Chief Mark Embrey at the City Council study session on Tuesday. Embrey has served in the City for 29 years. His last day will be Dec. 29, 2012.

The City announced earlier in the week Battalion Chief Ralph Mundell would replace Embrey as deputy fire chief, the second-in-command position under Fire Chief Tim Scranton.

Other promotions within the department include Fire Captain Craig Reinhardt and Fire Captain David Grate who will both advance to the rank of fire battalion chief and Firefighter Michael Hand who will be promoted to fire captain.

Beverly High donates to Albion St. School for 85th year

Last Friday, 50 Beverly High students along with members of the band, cheer, and Madrigals delivered over 300 toys to the students of Albion Street Elementary in East Los Angeles. The annual visit by Beverly High students has been a holiday tradition since 1927.

Guard-forward Ben Cohen added 12 points for the Normans, making all eight of his free throws.

The score was tied 30-30 entering the fourth quarter. Beverly Hills led 22-20 at halftime and 9-8 at the end of the first quarter.

Siavash Yektafar scored five points, all in the final 3:10, Ronan Massana and Jalen Sands four each, and Daniel Dayan two for the Normans.

Beverly Hills advanced to the fifth-place game by defeating Hamilton, 49-47, in a fifth-place semifinal last Thursday, overcoming a 10-point deficit entering the fourth quarter.

Ryan Manoocheri made four 3-point baskets for 12 of his game-high 20 points in the fourth quarter as the Normans outscored the Yankees, 19-7.

Manoocheri scored 18 of his points in the second half, making two 3-point baskets in the third quarter.

Ifekwunigwe added 11, all in the second half, including six in the fourth quarter and a 3-point basket in the third.

Beverly Hills trailed 12-11 at the end of the first quarter, 28-15 at halftime and 40-30 entering the fourth quarter.

Yektafar added seven, including a first-quarter 3-point basket, Dayan and Massana three each, Keimon Downey two and Cohen, Eli Sachs and Sands one each.

The Normans lost to Cabrillo, 65-43, Dec. 12, in a game to decide first place in Pool A, trailing 22-6 at the end of the first quarter, 39-18 at halftime and 51-32 entering the fourth quarter.

“Cabrillo’s bigger, faster, stronger,” Turner said. “They have a lot more confidence than we had. Our guys were kind of like deer in headlights. They have a tremendous amount of athleticism. They shot the ball well.”

Ifekwunigwe scored 10 points, Manoocheri nine on three second-half 3-point baskets, Massana eight, Cohen and Yektafar five each, Dayan and Sachs two each and Sands and Max Walder one each.

Beverly Hills began the tournament by routing Helen Bernstein, 75-28, in a pool-play game Dec. 10, outscoring the Dragons, 16-0, in the first quarter.

Turner said it was the first time as a coach or player that he had been involved in a game where a team failed to score in a quarter.

The Normans outscored Helen Bernstein, 17-11, in the second quarter, increasing their lead to 33-11 at halftime, and 27-7 in the third quarter, giving them a 60-18 lead entering the fourth quarter.

Josh Javahari and Massana each scored a game-high 12 points. Javahari made a game-high four 3-point baskets, three in the second quarter and one in the fourth. Massana scored 10 of his 12 points in the third quarter.

Cohen added 11 points, Yektafar 10, including a third-quarter 3-point basket, Manoocheri nine on three 3-point baskets, Trevor Bergher six on two 3-point baskets, Dayan and Jack Ross four each, Jonathon Ghermezi, Nima Rafiezedah and Sachs two each and Ifekwunigwe one.

The tournament was held at the Swim-Gym.

Beverly Hills opened the season by losing at South Torrance, 51-50, on a 3-point basket as time expired in overtime in a nonleague game Nov. 20. The Normans were unable to hold a five-point lead with about two minutes to play in overtime, missing five of seven free throws and committing two turnovers during that span, Turner said.

Downey, a senior forward, and Sands, a sophomore guard, drew praise for their play from Turner. Cohen scored 12 points and pulled down eight rebounds, leading Beverly Hills in both categories. Downey had 11 points and seven rebounds. Massana added eight points, Manoocheri seven, Yektafar five, Sands four, Dayan two and Bergher one.

To all heirs, beneficiaries, creditors, contingent creditors, and persons who may otherwise be interested in the will or estate, or both, of ELLIOTT H. KAJAN

A PETITION FOR PROBATE has been filed by Judy M. Kajan in the Superior Court of California, County of LOS ANGELES.

THE PETITION FOR PROBATE requests that Judy M. Kajan be appointed as personal representative to administer the estate of the decedent.

THE PETITION requests the decedent's will and codicils, if any, be admitted to probate. The will and any codicils are available for examination in the file kept by the court.

THE PETITION requests authority to administer the estate under the Independent Administration of Estates Act. (This authority will allow the personal representative to take many actions without obtaining court approval. Before taking certain very important actions, however, the personal representative will be required to give notice to interested persons unless they have waived notice or consented to the proposed action.) The independent administration authority will be granted unless an interested person files an objection to the petition and shows good cause why the court should not grant the authority.

IF YOU OBJECT to the granting of the petition, you should appear at the hearing and state your objections or file written objections with the court before the hearing. Your appearance may be in person or by your attorney.

IF YOU ARE A CREDITOR or a contingent creditor of the deceased, you must file your claim with the court and mail a copy to the personal representative appointed by the court within four months from the date of first issuance of letters as provided in Probate Code section 9100. The time for filing claims will not expire before four months from the hearing date noticed above.

YOU MAY EXAMINE the file kept by the court. If you are a person interested in the estate, you may file with the court a Request for Special Notice (form DE-154) of the filing of an inventory and appraisal of estate assets or of any petition or account as provided in Probate Code section 1250. A Request for Special Notice form is available from the court clerk. Attorney for petitioner: PAUL H. WEISMAN, ESQ. SBN 107199 LAW OFFICE OF PAUL H WEISMAN 15821 VENTURA BLVD STE 275 ENCINO CA 91436
