“Former Horace Mann School Principal Passes Away” [Issue #1117]

The sad passing of the legendary Horace Mann School Principal Dr. Art Fields brought back some very special memories. In 1977, as new immigrants, my family and I chose to live in Beverly Hills because of the stellar reputation of the BHUSD.

We were warmly welcomed by Dr. Fields and the Horace Mann School community where enthusiastic educators inspired students to learn. When Dr. Fields heard that I had teaching credentials from South Africa and the UK, he encouraged me to become a parent volunteer in the classroom. Soon elementary students were introduced to drama, choral verse and public speaking. First graders participated in a play called “George Washington’s Birthday.” I also created a debate class in which gifted and talented students analyzed and respected different viewpoints. They were encouraged to look at both sides of an issue and to support their viewpoints with concrete evidence. Josh Gross, the esteemed publisher of Beverly Hills Weekly, was one of my gifted debate students! Dr. Fields always endorsed innovative ideas that were in the best interests of the students.

In 1984, after being sworn in as United States citizens at the Dorothy Chandler Pavilion, my son and I were welcomed by his 5th grade team of singing teachers and students who were dressed in red, white, and blue in our honor. Dr. Fields and I were moved to tears when the students sang the American medley of “America The Beautiful,” “God Bless America,” and “The Star Spangled Banner.”

Anything was possible in those golden years. As Dr. Fields gave me carte blanche, he actually helped to launch my teaching career in the BHUSD. His strong leadership skills and his expertise as an educator inspired me to pursue my passion for teaching. Now after more than 30 years of service, I am truly grateful that I had the good fortune to be associated with a principal of his caliber so soon after arriving in the U.S.A.

“County Should Consider Using Measure HHH Funds for Seismic Retrofitting”

[Issue #1117]

Apartment Association executive director Dan Yukelson proposes that Measure HHH funds ($1.2 billion for housing the homeless) be drawn upon to help property owners pay the cost of seismic retrofit. It will help to keep rental housing affordable, he says. Finally something this landlord and I can agree on!

Wood-framed, multi-story buildings that are identified by city hall as at-risk of collapse should be shored-up. Everyone will benefit. But need landlords belly-up to the public-money trough? Beverly Hills City Council has agreed that tenants will pay for seismic retrofit by passing that cost through over a period of years. Personally, I look at that as investing in the landlord’s property, even as I pay rent, but without receiving any material benefit.

Perhaps Yukelson will agree that retrofit costs should not fall on tenants. He has said that he views his tenants as customers and not business partners. Maybe it’s better if somebody else pays the tab for retrofit.

Yukelson proposes to draw on Measure HHH funds for retrofit. But that won’t help Beverly Hills landlords (or tenants) because that proposition was approved by Los Angeles city voters who won’t be keen on chipping-in for Beverly Hills retrofits.

City hall could step in with guaranteed, low-interest financing, or perhaps shoulder some of the capital cost. In exchange for that investment the landlord could agree to keep the directly-affected units as permanently ‘affordable’ (with income eligibility determined by the city). The public would invest and the landlord would provide the public with a commensurate benefit. Everybody wins!

Yet I presume that Yukelson won’t recommend that deal to his association’s landlord-members. He’s mocked our councilmembers as “socialists” for lowering the cap on rent increases, after all, and the suggestion of permanently-designated affordable housing could seem like more folly like what sunk the Soviets.

The confounding thing is that Yukelson suggests landlords belly-up to the public bond-money trough. That’s not a bad idea per se. I like the concept so long as it comes with a public benefit. But isn’t that what economists call “socializing” the costs? Seems like that should be anathema to freedom-loving property owners in the U.S.A.

Beverly High Prepares to Resume Sports

Beverly High is preparing to resume sports as COVID-19 cases decrease in Los Angeles County.

According to the BHUSD Board of Education meeting last Tuesday, COVID-19 cases must fall below 14 per 100,000 before sports competitions can resume outdoors. LA County’s adjusted COVID-19 case rate was 12.3 as of last week.

Director of District Athletics Tim Ellis said the youth sports guidelines have changed dramatically in the last few weeks.

“We had gone from the LA County Department of Public Health Order being quiet since the 22nd of October last year to finally last week coming out and kind of aligning [themselves] with the California Department of Public Health,” Ellis said. “Which moved sports to the forefront and [allowed] them to get a little closer to reopening.”

According to the State of California’s color-coded tier system, low-contact sports like cross country, golf, swimming, B&G tennis and track and field can resume while the county is in the purple or “widespread” tier.

Cross country is a fall sport in the BHUSD, while the remaining low-contact sports take place in spring. Ellis said the district is trying to get cross country athletes some sort of competition despite their season being canceled.

“We’re going to try to get four or five dual meets that are outside of CIF, but we’re still going to try to get them running,” Ellis said.

Outdoor-moderate contact sports may resume while the county is in the red or “substantial” tier. For the BHUSD, this includes baseball, cheerleading, girls lacrosse, softball and tennis doubles.

“[Moderate-contact sports] will move forward as the case drops low and we move into the red tier,” Ellis said.

Outdoor high-contact sports may resume while the county is in the orange or “moderate” tier. For the BHUSD, this includes football, boys lacrosse, boys soccer, girls soccer and water polo. While football and water polo are fall sports, Ellis said the district will try to give athletes opportunities to compete by contacting other schools for outside league games.

Indoor moderate-contact and high-contact sports may resume while the county is in the yellow or “minimal” tier. For the BHUSD, this includes boys and girls volleyball, boys and girls basketball, wrestling and water polo.

“The issue we have with the indoor sports is none of the county health orders or the state health order has allowed for anything indoors yet,” Ellis said. “So all of our indoor sports are on hold. We cannot do anything indoors as of yet.”

Ellis added that the county requires football and water polo players to get weekly COVID-19 tests before any contests.

Several Beverly High sports are in pod training, which are groups of 12 athletes that condition for their respective sports together. This includes football, wrestling, cheer, girls and boys volleyball, softball, baseball and water polo.

According to Ellis’ presentation, boys and girls soccer, boys and girls basketball and track and field will begin pod training in early March.

Student athletes also follow a set of COVID-19 health and safety protocols. Athletes must enter campus through a designated gate, check-in and have their temperature taken and break every 20 minutes to sanitize their hands and drink water.

“We will continue these practices even as the public health order eases their restrictions,” Ellis said, “There will always be a BHHS athletic director, myself, present at all workouts.”

Beverly High has prepared tentative competition start dates. According to Ellis, the dates are the following:

- Boys Basketball – 4/20
- Girls Basketball – 4/20
- Boys Soccer – 4/6
- Girls Soccer – 4/6
- Boys Volleyball – 4/9
- Boys Tennis – 3/18
- Girls Tennis – 3/18
- Baseball – 4/28
- Softball – 4/28
- Wrestling – 4/15
- Lacrosse B&G – 4/6
- Swimming B&G – 4/15
- Track and Field – 4/6

While the county has allowed sports to resume outdoors, it has not allowed the same for performing arts.

BHUSD Board of Education Vice President Tristen Walker-Shuman, on Facebook, said the county and state have not cleared performing arts even if it’s done outdoors.

“As soon as they update the guidelines and allow performing arts, we will bring them back,” Walker-Shuman said.

Fire Alarm

The Beverly Hills Fire Department put out a fire at an apartment complex on the corner of Charleville Boulevard and Reeves Drive Thursday afternoon.

According to Fire Chief Greg Barton, the fire started in the kitchen and there were no injuries.

Commissioners have discussed relocation fees in their past three meetings. Tenant, landlord and at-large commissioners have had differing opinions on how the city should distribute the fees.

According to the commission's agenda report, city staff researched 13 companies to assess the average cost of moving in Beverly Hills but only 10 responded. The agenda report reports the following ranges of moving costs:

- Between $672 and $1,344 for studios.
- Between $672 and $2,919 for one bedrooms.
- Between $1,668 and $4,732 for two bedrooms.
- Between $4,056 and $6,760 for three bedrooms.

The commission will review the costs to consider how that should affect the amount landlords pay in relocation fees.

Planning Commission Continues Discussion on North Oakhurst Drive Project

The Planning Commission postponed last Thursday a hearing for a development plan review until March 11 to allow residents more time to review the proposal.

The development plan review is for the construction of a three-story single-family home with a basement on 331 North Oakhurst Drive. The house is located in a multiple residential property zone. According to the commission's agenda report, single-family homes are allowed in multiple residential property zones and can be developed using multi-family development standards.

Planning Commissioners previously denied a request for a development plan review and nine variances for the project in 2018. The previous proposal asked for a two-story, 2,329 square foot single-family residence.

Project applicant David Ramin later submitted an updated development plan review application in 2019. According to the agenda report, the proposed project complies with the city's zoning codes.

But several residents surrounding the project said they were not given adequate time to review it. According to Community Development Director Ryan Gohlich, residents were given two weeks to review the plans.

Steve Mayor said the project's plans are complex and the city's agenda report on it is lacking.

"To be able to [give] proper public comment is not available at this time," Mayor said. "Our original premise had been that when we actually requested to be able to look at the plans in I think December, we were told we couldn't because city hall was closed. If we had been able to look at it then, that would have been a different issue."

He added that the community wants to look at every piece of paper related to the project there is.

"The problem is we need time to actually look at this," Mayor said. "This is a project which has been very contentious to the neighborhood since its original reiteration was filed in 2014. This is our sixth or seventh time that we've had to actually go through this."

Hamid Gabbay, who is the architect for the project, said three months ago the project team had a community meeting that showed all the plans through an online presentation and only two people participated in it.

"It's only a townhouse of 2,000 square feet plus a basement. I don't see any complicity," Gabbay said. "Anybody could review it in 10 minutes and they had 15 days to review the drawings. I believe more than anything else this is a tactic just to delay the approval of the project."

Commissioner Andy Licht said the commission should choose a date to reschedule the hearing that's agreeable to the applicant.

"There's strange times during [COVID-19]," Licht said. "It's not clear to me that they didn't have enough time but it's not clear to me that they did have enough time. So that being said, I don't see the harm in postponing it to one or two meetings."

Vice Chair Lori Greene Gordon said she has no issue with the postponement and it would be fair to the people in the community.

"The people who are developing it have had nearly two years with these plans," Gordon said. "I think that the people who live in the community require more than two weeks."

Chair Peter Ostroff said he was not persuaded that there is any reason to postpone the project.

"I am concerned that when we've got a lot of complicated and extensive projects that are coming up on our agendas in the next few months," Ostroff said. "Because one or two folks ask that a hearing be postponed, that's going to create a lot of uncertainty in terms of when we're going to do what."

Council Awards Golden Shields to Nate 'N Al's Delicatessen, Gearys and former Gershwin Residence

The City Council honored Nate 'N Al's Delicatessen, Gearys Beverly Hills and the former Gershwin Residence with Golden Shield Awards Tuesday.

Councilmembers created the Golden Shield Award in 2019 to recognize contributors to the City of Beverly Hills' cultural history.

Al Mendelson and Nate Rimer established Nate 'N Al's in 1954 and added an addition to the business in 1964 to serve more customers. It became an iconic and popular restaurant among local residents and people in the entertainment industry.

It was run by the Mendelson family until 2019, when it was purchased by various investors including Shelli and Irving Azoff, Cindy Crawford, Rande Gerber and Jeff Shell.

H.L. Geary founded Gearys Beverly Hills in 1930. It was a specialty store that sold items like art supplies, dinnerware and housewarming gifts. Geary sold his business to Fred Meyer, a local businessman, in 1953. Meyer revamped the store to sell tableware lines, silver, china, glass, home accessories and gift items.

According to the council's agenda report, the business was briefly owned by a privately-held operator but still run by Meyer's grandson, Thomas Blumenthal. It was eventually sold back to the family and Blumenthal continues to manage it.

The Gershwin Residence, located at 1019 North Roxbury Drive, is a Spanish Colonial-revival style home created by architect Don Uhl in 1928. According to the agenda report, it was made for film star Monte Blue. It was later rented by musician Russ Columbo and then eventually music composers George and Ira Gershwin.

The home was demolished in 2005, but the city plans to place a plaque where it was once located to honor its cultural significance to American musical history.

Bregy Updates Parents on Controversial Model Ethnic Studies Curriculum

Superintendent Michael Bregy shared updates last Tuesday on the State of California's proposed model ethnic studies curriculum for public schools.

Assembly Bill 331, written by Assemblymember Jose Medina (D - Riverside), would have required high school students to take an ethnic studies course to graduate. These ethnic studies courses would have been based on a model ethnic studies curriculum. But a draft of the curriculum garnered allegations of anti-semitism, largely for its inclusion of the Boycott, Divestment, and Sanctions movement.

The BHUSD Board of Education and many parents expressed opposition to the then-current draft of the model curriculum in September. Gov. Gavin Newsom eventually vetoed the bill last year, but the curriculum continued to be revised.

According to Bregy, the curriculum has moved to the California Board of Education to vote on this month.

"There's no legislation that's requiring us to adopt anything right now," Bregy said. "I know that people are getting confused with some of the legislation that's been written for colleges, but we are not in that place right now that there's going to be a requirement for us to adopt this program."

He added that the ethnic studies model curriculum is actually a guideline. If approved, the curriculum would be a guidance document and therefore the district would not be required to make the ethnic studies course a graduation requirement.

BHUSD Considers Establishing a Facilities Committee

The BHUSD Board of Education discussed Tuesday establishing a facilities committee, which will potentially be a group that meets periodically to discuss the district's ongoing construction projects.

During the 2021-2022 board's first meeting in January, Board President Rachelle Marcus and Board member Mary Wells said they would like to join the district's facilities subcommittee in place of Board Vice President Tristen Walker-Shuman and Board member Noah Margo. The topic was continued to a future meeting when the board could not reach a consensus.

The facilities subcommittee was established after the district's project manager Don Blake asked for weekly meetings with board members and administrators to discuss construction.

Blake later emailed Marcus to state the meetings are at his discretion and he will not change the board members who attend. It is unclear why a vendor can choose which board members can attend meetings about the district's construction projects.

If the board approves the facilities committee, the group will be under its discretion. Bregy said it would be similar to the district's Finance and Citizens Bond Oversight Committees. Those committees are attended by two board members, administrators and appointed community members.

However, the facilities committee will not replace the facilities subcommittee. According to Bregy, Blake said he would like to continue having facilities subcommittee meetings in addition to the facilities committee meetings that he will also attend.

"I'm not sure I understand how setting up this [committee] addresses the issues that were with the other subcommittee," Wells said.

Marcus said she agrees with Wells.

"I have no control over the meeting that Mr. Blake is having," Marcus said. "You know that as far as I'm concerned, the meeting that I want is [the] facilities [committee] or construction committee that will operate the way the bylaws say it should operate with minutes, adoption of the agenda and open to the public. I can't speak to the other one."

Margo said when he first started on the board it had a facilities committee. He said the committee will be needed on the heels of the 7/11 Committee report. The report had suggestions for which district properties should be repurposed or declared surplus.

"We're going to need a committee like this, so I'll support it in that regard," Margo said. "I do, though, believe that this committee should have either representatives from the CBOC or community members involved as well. Because you're going to need that input when you start moving into these discussions about future projects."

Walker-Shuman and Marcus agreed that the board should consider having community members join.

The board is expected to vote on the facilities committee March 9.

Council Extends Lot Line Adjustment Ordinance

The City Council extended an interim ordinance regarding lot line adjustments Tuesday.

According to the council's agenda report, the council approved an interim ordinance that prohibited a lot adjustment which would create or expand a lot that crosses the City of Beverly Hills' boundary in January. The ordinance took effect immediately and was set to expire on March 11.

Councilmembers unanimously extended the ordinance by another 10 months and 15 days.

According to the agenda report, the ordinance allows the city to research any potential impacts a parcel under split jurisdiction could have on the surrounding community and what circumstances would justify a lot that crosses the city boundary.

The ordinance was created after the council reviewed an appeal of the Planning Commission's decision to deny a lot line adjustment to a home on Hillcrest Road and West Sierra Mar Drive. The applicant wanted to create two lots out of the three lots that exist on the site. Councilmembers ultimately rejected the appeal.

Council Supports Implementing Neighborhood Slow Streets Program

The City of Beverly Hills may implement a Neighborhood Slow Streets program to help mitigate traffic congestion.

City Councilmembers unanimously supported moving forward with a trial of the program during the pandemic at its study session Tuesday. According to the council's agenda report, the program would restrict residential streets to only allow local traffic. This could improve social distancing by giving residents more space to walk, bicycle or do other outdoor activities.

Traffic control materials, such as A-frame barricades and cones, will be placed at each entrance of participating residential streets. According to the agenda report, one barricade would state that only locals can access the street while the other would have a custom Neighborhood Slow Streets sign.

Councilmember Julian Gold said he supports trying the program out on a maximum of five blocks to start.

"I think as a concept, it's a nice concept," Gold said. "The implementation of it can be difficult and the unintended consequences I think are a little [concerning] but I would be okay with trying this. Maybe not in consecutive blocks but blocks in different parts of the city just to see how it works."

A resident sponsor must submit an application for the city to review their block to participate in the program. If the application is approved, the resident sponsor must show that at least 51% of the people living on that particular block support having the program.

Councilmember Lili Bosse said she sees the program as a traffic calming opportunity.

"I recognize that we're using this as a COVID-time to look at it and explore it, but Los Angeles has this even prior to COVID – this type of slow streets," Bosse said. "I think it's about time that we explore that and for me, since this is resident initiated, I think that's already half the battle."

According to the agenda report, the program has the potential to help calm traffic and make residents more comfortable using the entire street. However, it could also cause traffic on other streets, encourage gatherings and/or confuse drivers/residents.

Vice Mayor Robert Wunderlich said the program is great and he enthusiastically supports it.

"It provides an opportunity for people to experience something, so depending upon the feedback that we get I hope we will consider – if its positive feedback – expanding it beyond the pandemic time period," Wunderlich said. "In my mind, it clearly supports what we say we love about the character of our communities."

Councilmember John Mirisch said the program shouldn't just be something that happens during the pandemic and the city should consider a more attractive alternative to the barricades so the streets look nice.

"This is a great opportunity," Mirisch said. "We probably should have done it a year ago, but better late than never. I'm happy we're doing this and I think we should get more reports on it and think about others ways that we can make the situation more attractive."

Mayor Lester Friedman said the program is an excellent idea.

"I think that we should get it advertised so we could get it implemented in this period of time, as soon as possible," Friedman said.

Traffic and Parking Commission To Consider Changing its Name

The Traffic and Parking Commission may change its name, according to its March 4 agenda.

Several commissioners have expressed interest in having a different name to better reflect their duties. The commission will discuss and consider a new name, such as the "Mobility Commission," at its Thursday morning meeting.

The Beverly Hills municipal code lists several responsibilities for the Traffic and Parking Commission, including performing functions and duties relative to traffic, parking and public transportation vehicles.

But according to the commission's agenda report, the commission's responsibilities have expanded to more broadly address transportation in Beverly Hills. This includes overseeing development of policies, programs and projects for multimodal mobility and traffic safety, and eventually providing public forums on mobility issues.

A new name for the commission would require the city to amend its municipal code through an ordinance. If the commission recommends a new name Thursday, city staff will present a report to the City Council Traffic and Parking Liaisons to consider.

Remembering Former Horace Mann Principal Dr. Art Fields

Growing up in Beverly Hills during the 1970's and riding my bike freely around the city protected by the many palm trees that surrounded my path was a rite of passage for most kids around these parts.

Roaming the 5.7 square miles of the city was safe as long as I didn't gerrymander over to a small area tucked away off of Charleville Blvd.

Unfortunately, at the tender age of six, I learned this lesson the hard way ...

The year was 1976 and nestled between Arnaz and Hamel Drives laid two massive glass doors.

Upon entering the Mecca of Horace Mann elementary – I was told to walk towards the knee-high swing door just a few feet away from the entrance. As I blasted my way through the little door, I noticed on the right there were rows and rows of teacher's boxes on a very tall wall.

On the left, there was Rita and Mary, the gatekeepers of the school, sitting at their desks, smiling and waving "Hello Steven." With a quick and sheepish waive, I put my head down and kept walking until I hit a dead end.

I was a first grader at Horace Mann and I was at a crossroads. To my right was a door that led to freedom, also known as a hallway leading back to Mrs. Twelvetree's class..

To my left ... that was Dr. Fields' office and the place I was "summonsed" to.

As a six year old with a weak bladder and not understanding what the word "summonsed" meant, making a left turn would put me on a glide path towards a 200 square foot office of pure intimidation.

I took a breath, rolled my eyes and decided it was time to meet my maker.

With my best John Wayne impersonation, I turned left and slowly walked to Dr. Fields' massive door thinking about only one thing.

The "paddle." The infamous paddle ... It was legendary, many kids talked about it, but no one ever met the paddle up close.

As I opened the door, Dr. Fields was sitting behind his desk in a three-piece suit.

"Fenton, have a seat." ...

Thankful that I had not yet wet my pants, I scanned the room looking for the paddle and then I did what I was told as I walked towards the empty chair.

Forty-five years later the details of the "summonsed" are a little fuzzy. I vaguely remember something about having a kid in a head-lock but I don't remember if I thought that was actually considered "fighting" or not.

As I sat uncomfortably in the chair, my eyes met his.

"What's this I hear about you getting in a fight?"

I sat silent and didn't answer – maybe I was still searching for the paddle or just focused on holding my bladder. Regardless, Dr. Fields took the uncomfortable pause that I just initiated and turned it into an Emmy winning performance on how to gently use the velvet hammer (rather the velvet paddle).

Sitting motionless, Dr. Fields quickly started to plain speak about why fighting is never the answer. I found myself hanging on his every word and as he finished his micro-tough love speech, he ended with a searing rendition of how he never wants to see me in his office again while ... simultaneously swiveling his chair ever so slightly to the right and looking over his shoulder at the paddle, which now magically appeared perfectly behind him gracing the top of his return desk.

Art Fields was the black Harry Houdini! It was better than watching synchronized swimming at the Olympics. His timing was mesmerizing as I felt my eyes shoot out of my head while staring at the shiny wood paddle.

I quickly stood up and told him he'd never see me in his office again ... and he didn't!

He knew he scared the hell out of me that day and always made it a point over the years to put out his hand and with a friendly smile, shake mine whenever he would see me.

From that first time in his office to the last time I saw him some 10 years ago – he always called me Fenton. I heard him say it so many times that until I was 10, I thought it was actually my first name.

Over the ensuing years, Dr. Fields led Horace Mann with grit and grace. A commanding presence, with a soft touch and an underrated sense of humor.

On Valentine's Day, he would routinely wear his red three-piece suit. St Patrick's day, he was never afraid to bust out the green three-piece suit. The man never met a color he didn't like.

Understated with a dash of flash, he was tough, he was tender and most importantly he was fair.

His gut instinct was legendary. Over the years, he proved himself to be an excellent judge of educators – hiring one fantastic teacher after another. However, his best skill set may have been his ability to keep people happy, motivated and engaged.

Whether he hired you or whether he inherited you, Dr. Fields had a knack for holding onto and keeping the best of the best.

From 1972 – 1994, there was at least one "Fenton" kid at Horace Mann..

Over those 22 years my siblings and I had mostly the same teachers. Korage, Twelvetree, Boraz, Easton, Morehead, Zonka, McCann, Trafton, Katz, Phipps, Rutberg, Cohen and our all-time favorite ... Mr. Brown.

Only someone of Dr Fields' exemplary leadership could have propelled that kind of continuity.

Fast forward: 25 years after leaving Horace Mann, I had the honor of being elected President of the Beverly Hills Board of Education.

One of the first things I did was sit down with Steve Kessler, a protégé of Dr. Fields and a beloved teacher at Horace Mann. I've known Kessler since I was seven years old and Steve ranks right up there with some one of the greatest educators in our district's history.

A born leader who's changed the lives of thousands of kids in our community, no one knew Horace Mann better.

My goal was to convince him that if I could find two other votes, he would be the first teacher in our school district to go straight from teaching in a classroom to principal of the school. Before I made my pitch, I needed to understand why as a veteran teacher of 30 years, he never wanted to make the jump into administration.

I point-blank asked him why someone of his considerable talents never considered becoming a principal.

Kessler looked me dead in the eyes and said, "I had Art Fields as my principal, what could be better than that?"

Nothing.

In the fall of 2010, I entered the Mecca once again.

Through the glass doors and past the little swing door, I went.

EXCERPTS FROM STEVEN FENTON'S JOURNAL

2:23 A.M. – JUNE 10, 2001

Tonight was Dr. Fields retirement dinner at Miramar hotel. I am 31 years old and I found myself lucky enough to be at the Miramar hotel for the retirement dinner of Dr. Art Fields. My elementary school principal and a titan of the BHUSD.

As I wrote in my journal that night, I sat at a great table with my sister (Jenny), Mikey Roberts, Connie & Willie Brien, and Jeannie & Kathryn Bazilauskas.

My mom and Linda Roberts put the event together and my "Dad was smooth as ever" as the emcee of the night.

One by one speakers jumped on stage to pay tribute to Dr Fields.

There was my third grade teacher Irene Easton who spoke beautifully, as did former Superintendent Ken Peters whose speech was quite hilarious.

My fourth grade teacher and crush, Rachel Zonka was there. So was Flo Cohen, Ellen Morehead, Lynn Koff and Marty Nislick, among many others.

Horace Mann royalty definitely came out to pay homage to a man who meant so much to so many.

This time I was tall enough to kick it open.

Teacher's boxes were still on the right side of a wall that looked much smaller now.

On the left this time I wasn't met with a "Hello Steven."

Rather a "Hello Mr. Fenton."

With a quick and sheepish waive, I went keeping my head down and walking straight until I hit a dead end. I was no longer a first grader at Horace Mann with a weak bladder, I was the leader of the entire school district but still had never seen the inside of the principal's office since that fateful day with Dr. Fields in 1976.

Freedom was no longer to the right, it was definitely to the left but I still did my best John Wayne impersonation as I slowly walked to Kessler's new office.

I savored every step as I got closer and closer to a door that no longer looked massive. As I entered, there wasn't 200 square feet of intimidation waiting for me

And there was no paddle in sight – only a big bearhug waiting for me by Kessler both knowing that Dr. Fields legacy still loomed large and the influence he had on our lives was still very present.

Steven Fenton served on the Board of Education from 2007 to 2011.

"Over the ensuing years, Dr. Fields led Horace Mann with grit and grace. A commanding presence, with a soft touch and an underrated sense of humor"

BHUSD SETTLES WITH BHEA TO REOPEN SCHOOLS

Grades K-5 Set to Resume In-Person Next Week

By Ani Gasparyan

The BHUSD reached Wednesday a legal resolution with its teachers' union to reopen schools in March – albeit a few days later than it previously announced.

The Beverly Hills Education Association, which is the union representing district faculty and staff, filed last week an injunction against the BHUSD's announcement that schools would be returning to in-person instruction on March 4 and March 8. It later filed an Unfair Practice Charge with the Public Employment Relations Board.

"BHEA has an agreement with the district that prioritizes the health and safety of our students and educators. We intend to honor it and we intend to defend it," the union wrote on Facebook Friday. "Our case is strong. We will do whatever it takes to protect our students and our educators."

Now, the union and district have reached an agreement to officially reopen schools on March 8 for transitional kindergarten through second grade and March 9 for third through fifth grades. Middle school and high school will continue online until the county changes its reopening guidelines.

According to Superintendent Michael Bregy, the district agreed to delay its reopening by a couple days to give teachers more time to receive the COVID-19 vaccine. Los Angeles County entered the second phase of its vaccine distribution plan, which includes teachers, Monday.

"We are aware that LA County is preparing to give BHUSD our first allocation of vaccinations for our employees this week and each subsequent week until everyone who wants to be vaccinated has received both doses," Bregy said. "We have started creating a list to prioritize in-person elementary teachers as they are the first teachers to interact with students in the classroom. We know that many employees have secured vaccinations already and some have booked appointments outside of the district."

The district has also agreed to add more COVID-19 health and safety precautions for staff, which includes testing them for COVID-19 twice a week. It is unclear what the remaining precautions will be as of press time.

Felix De La Torre, general counsel for the Public Employment Relations Board, said both the district and union appear pleased with the outcome of the agreement.

"The parties have asked for the request for injunctive relief to be placed in abeyance, so that appears to be a good sign," De La Torre said.

De La Torre added that if an agreement had not been reached, the union would have asked his division to go to court in order to ask a superior court judge to enjoin the start date for in-person instruction.

Board of Education President Rachelle Marcus said she is thrilled the district and BHEA have reached an agreement.

"Our elementary students will be returning to the classroom after almost one full year of virtual education and I am proud that our dedicated staff and teachers will be working together to give our students in person instruction for the rest of the school year," Marcus said.

GIBRALTAR PROJECT UNDER REVIEW

Planning Commission Approves Extension for Proposed Hotel

By Ani Gasparyan

The Planning Commission extended permits last Thursday for a proposed hotel project located at the iconic Gibraltar Square Office Tower.

The future 154-room hotel, owned by the company Oakshire, LP, was previously approved for conditional use and historical incentive permits in 2020. According to the Planning Commission meeting, the conditional use permit allows for a zoning exception for the hotel, off-site parking and modified loading spaces. The HIP allows the project to deviate from certain municipal code standards because it is located at a Beverly Hills historical landmark.

According to the commission's agenda report, the previously-approved permits expired after a year because construction had yet to take place at the site. Commissioners unanimously voted to extend both permits until 2022.

Chair Peter Ostroff said the one-year provision to use the permits is unrealistic.

"My point of view is maybe we should take a look at that, in terms of wanting to change that standard because I don't think that that really is sufficient for a project like this to basically break ground," Ostroff said.

Community Development Director

Ryan Gohlich responded that reviewing the one-year provision is a reasonable suggestion.

"Maybe next time we look at doing some code clean-up items, maybe that's a topic that we can include for consideration," Gohlich said. "It is quite challenging nowadays with [the] various codes that have to be complied with to where somebody is able to actually start physical construction within one year of approval."

Commissioner Myra Demeter said the project is interesting and adaptive reuse is something the commission strives to do when looking at historical buildings.

"The only thing I would like to put in here is I think that the site itself would be a very fine place for consideration of a mixed use project," Demeter said. "I know that the applicant has already given us reasons why he is still going with a hotel. I would like to encourage him to look a little bit further."

Vice Chair Lori Greene Gordon said she is happy to make the findings to approve the project.

"I agree with Commissioner Demeter that if I had my choice, I'd rather see a mixed-use project there," Gordon said.

"But I understand that the applicants decided to have what they would like to have."

She added that she agrees with Ostroff's statement that a year to begin construction is too short a timeframe.

"I do agree that the one-year time frame is completely untenable and if we allow three years for a single-family home, I can't possibly understand why hotels allow for only one year," she said. "I know that's some sort of glitch in the system that should be corrected."

BEVERLY HILLS CREATIVE OFFICES

New Offices Designed to Enhance the Beverly Hills Community by:

Generating substantial new business tax revenue our City needs more than ever due to the pandemic to support vital public services including first responders.

Dedicating almost half of the site to lushly landscaped gardens and courtyards, with an excess of parking available to the public, supporting the entire area.

Creating innovative, boutique-sized individual office buildings with flexible spaces – unlike anything offered in the LA region – strengthening Beverly Hills' competitive edge.

Repurposing obsolete railroad land to serve the City's current and future needs, retaining and attracting desirable prominent creative companies.

Transforming the eastern gateway of the City with architecturally significant design which will increase the value of neighboring commercial and residential property.

Complementing the City's Entertainment District with new tenants who will support existing local businesses.

Valuable Public Benefit

Beverly Hills Land Company proposes to convey ownership of more than 2 ½ acres of land to the City which includes the triangle median on Santa Monica Boulevard at Doheny Drive, along with Lot 13.

The City will be able to use this land at its discretion for any number of desirable public uses, including a beautiful park with an iconic ceremonial gateway to the east. An ongoing DTSC process will result in the land being cleaned up to applicable regulatory standards at no cost to the City.

Farmers Market will remain open! Both directions of traffic on Civic Center Drive will remain open during construction!
