9900 Wilshire demolition phase scheduled to begin in summer

9900 Wilshire rendering

Representatives for the 9900 Wilshire project gave a presentation at the Board of Education meeting Tuesday to address community concerns on the upcoming construction work projected to start in May.

The 9900 Wilshire project is located between The Beverly Hilton and the Los Angeles Country Club, with El Rodeo to the north and Beverly High to the south.

The first stage includes constructing a 12-foot high fencing barrier along the project's perimeter that will remain standing throughout the construction. The fence is for safety and to minimize sound, according to Rudolph and Sletten President Martin Sisemore. A lighted, protective canopy will be along Santa Monica and Wilshire Boulevards.

Rudolph and Sletten is the construction manager and general contractor for the project, who also worked on Beverly High's Science and Technology Center and Beverly Vista's modernization project

Once permits are approved, abatement, which is removing leftover harmful materials such as asbestos and lead paint, of the Robinson's May building will occur at the same time the fence is being constructed. The structure will be wrapped to contain any harmful materials and dust from contaminating the outside environment, and a filtration system will be in place. Workers will be wearing protective gear.

"The building itself is the envelope for the natural protection of the employees and the community," Sisemore said.

The parking structure will be demolished while El Rodeo is out of school in early June. El Rodeo students will attend summer session on another BHUSD campus while sewer improvements are being done, according to Principal Kevin Painter.

After the parking structure demolition and the abatement process is finished, the Robinson's May building will be demolished. The demolition phase will be complete before El Rodeo returns to school session, according to Sisemore.

"It's our obligation to make sure that all demolition work is completed within that time frame,” Sisemore said.

During the summer window, a water line along the LA Country Club will be rerouted down Santa Monica Blvd. and up Merv Griffin Way and reconnecting Wilshire Blvd. to “avoid any issue with breakage.” The utility will be shut down during the summer session, and the new line is projected for use in Sept. While the water line along Merv Griffin Way is inside the fence line, traffic mitigation measures will need to be in place for the routes along Santa Monica and Wilshire Blvds.

To address community’s concerns on traffic, construction parking will be on-site and truck entry and exit will only be on Santa Monica. Workers will direct traffic appropriately.

The 9900 Wilshire project will have a 13-story building on the north, and a 16-story building on the south with 233 units, according to Richard Meier and Partners Architects Principal Jim Crawford. Retail and restaurant space will be along Santa Monica with landscaping and a public park. Employee and patron parking will be separate from residential parking.

Construction is projected to take place in January 2015, with final completion in November 2017. The 9900 Wilshire project will work in coordination with the Waldorf Astoria construction project.

A Beverly Hills: 100 Years, 100 Stories preview will be available for viewing at the Beverly Hills Centennial Block Party on Sunday.

100 Years, 100 Stories is an oral and visual history of the City of Beverly Hills. The first episode will show the first natives who inhabited Beverly Hills’ land thousands of years ago, to the movie stars who pushed for the City’s independence. Learn the significance of the statue in the electric fountain at Beverly Gardens Park, and the public art sculpture, Celluloid, by Merrell Cage, which is located on Olympic Boulevard at Beverly Drive.

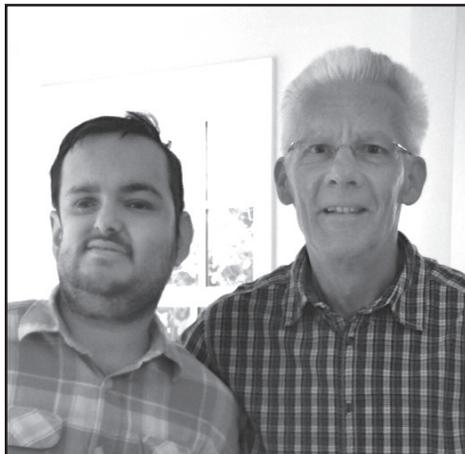

“It will inform our visitors and resident celebrants why we are celebrating our independence in April, and give people something to do while waiting to ride the ferris wheel and eat cake,” Beverly Hills resident and 100 Years, 100 Stories filmmaker Phil Savenick said.

The QR code will direct you immediately to the video link to watch on your smartphone. Postcards with the QR code will be passed out during the Beverly Hills Centennial Block Party on Sunday.

Hebroni meets life-saving donor Entz from Germany

Frank Hebroni and Peter Entz

Through the “Be the Match” program, Frank Hebroni met his life-saving donor from Germany, Peter Entz, who visited California earlier this month.

“Be the Match” is a global nonprofit organization that matches patients who have life-threatening blood cancers, such as leukemia and lymphoma, with a potential bone marrow donor. About 1 in 500 donors will actually proceed with the donation process. Beverly Hills Weekly has registered hundreds of potential bone marrow transplant donors in the past eight months through “Be the Match.”

Hebroni was 10 years old when he was diagnosed with rhabdomyosarcoma, a type of cancer. Through treatment, the cancer went into remission. When he was 15 and 24, Hebroni was diagnosed with leukemia. At 24, the doctors told him that his best chance for survival was to find a bone marrow donor.

Hebroni was first told that he is more likely to find a compatible donor from the Persian-Jewish community. A bone marrow donor drive was held at Nessah Synagogue during the summer of 2011 where thousands of community members showed up to register.

“People should register to donate because it’s such an easy process and it can save a life,” Hebroni said.

Younger donors have a higher chance for transplant success, according to the “Be the Match” website. Over 90% of the time, doctors request donors between the ages of 18 and 44.

No potential match came through from the drive, but Hebroni was matched in October 2011 with Entz, a 59-year-old male with a heart condition from Germany. The procedure was done at the City of Hope in Duarte.

“Before the procedure I was anxious and excited,” Hebroni said. “Afterwards, I felt relieved and was ready to recover. I had to stay in the hospital for a few months to prevent any infections.”

Entz knew little English, but they were able to communicate that he wanted to come to California for the first time to meet Hebroni.

Hebroni's family picked up Entz, his daughter Christina, and her boyfriend Thomas, from LAX. Christina studied English in college and was able to be a translator for them. Hebroni's house was packed with family members that night for Shabbat.

"My cousins, aunts, [and] grandparents [were] waiting at our house, excited to meet him," Hebroni said.

Entz is retired and was previously employed in the government tax field.

Hebroni took Entz, Christina, and Thomas site-seeing around California. Hebroni said Entz loved relaxing by the beach, going on a bike ride on the beach, having a picnic on Ocean Avenue, and Entz thought that Venice Boardwalk was very interesting.

"[Entz] sat [in the] third row for a Lakers game and was amazed at [the] Staples Center," Hebroni said.

They also went to the Getty Museum, Venice and Zuma Beach, and Las Vegas. Entz left for Germany on April 17, and Hebroni said he will keep in touch with Entz by e-mail and phone.

Hebroni attends UCLA Medical School and plans to graduate next year.

"I was always interested in the field of medicine," Hebroni said. "Seeing somebody from a small town across the world do such a selfless act for a total stranger was very inspiring. He was more than willing to help save another person's life without knowing where they live or who they are."

Halimi named as new Beverly High Assistant Principal

Michelle Halimi

The Board of Education appointed Beverly High English teacher Michelle Halimi on Tuesday as a new Beverly High assistant principal.

"Thirty-eight percent of our [student] population is Persian American," Halimi told the Weekly. "To have an administrator that really understands the culture and understands the families in a different way is probably going to be really meaningful for the families and the staff, [and] it definitely will bring something new to the discussions with the administrative team."

Halimi graduated from Hawthorne, Beverly High in 2002, and San Diego State in 2006, which has a specific program to prepare English majors to teach in high school.

Halimi has been in charge of several programs, such as the Service Learning Program, a freshman orientation program called Link Crew, and what she feels was her biggest assignment, being in charge of Beverly High's WASC accreditation.

"I'm excited for a new challenge [and] to work with the students, families, [and] the staff," Halimi told the Weekly. "I love this school and I love this district and

Beverly Hills then & now

Hollywood's renowned restaurant, The Brown Derby, opened its third branch at 9537 Wilshire Boulevard on the northwest corner at Rodeo Drive in Beverly Hills in 1931, a site formerly occupied by a women's clothing store called "Petite Shop." The Derby served celebrities, locals, and tourists for over five decades until its closure in 1982. The building was remodeled beyond recognition in 1983. With the construction on the northeast corner opposite of the "Two Rodeo Drive" shopping complex, the City changed the 9537 Wilshire address to One Rodeo Drive, causing its value to rise. Bvlgari enjoyed residence in this iconic location for many years until recently, when Louis Vuitton took over.

A preliminary Measure E expenditure report reflecting amounts from its passage in Nov. 2008 to Dec. 31, 2013 shows the Board of Education has spent over $32 million of the $334 million bond.

To put these numbers in context, the 1993 Measure S bond was for $77 million total.

The draft report was compiled by Citizens' Oversight Committee member Joe Safier. The COC monitors that bond expenditures are in accordance with the bond measure. Safier drafts periodic expenditure reports to inform the community.

According to the draft, the top three expenditures went towards: architects ($8,773,031); attorneys ($7,186,199); and construction ($6,439,398). Vendors that were paid less than $100,000 totaled $1,202,183.

The law firms Quinn Emanuel and Miller Brown Dannis Attorneys worked on the Strategic Concepts litigation regarding former BHUSD Facilities Director Karen Christiansen. To date, the Board has reimbursed the Measure E funds $2.5 million for legal and other fees, according to the draft. Bernards and Primesource Consulting includes payments to BHUSD Consultant Tim Buresh.

Total funds received for the Measure E Bond fund, which includes 2009 and 2013 proceeds, interest and other income, amounts to $122,833,499. The fund balance as of Dec. 31, 2013, which includes unaudited amounts, is $90,320,172, according to the draft. The Board of Education has plans to accelerate the bond in November.

Total budgeted Measure E funds for the Horace Mann project is $62 million. In May 2013, the Horace Mann Auditorium was the first significant Measure E construction project that was completed, with approximately $4.4 million spent on renovations. The Horace Mann modernization project is scheduled to break ground this summer.

Former California Chief Justice Ronald George discusses 38 years on the bench and his new book

By Nancy Yeang

Your memoir, "Chief: The Quest for Justice in California," was recently published. What made you want to write it?

It really wasn't my idea. The Institute of Governmental Studies, which is part of University of California, Berkeley, was commissioned to do an oral history of me and I put it off. Once I retired I didn't have much of an excuse to say no, so I agreed to do it.

[Laura McCreary] came over and was very, very effective in her research learning about the courts because she wasn't a lawyer. She prepared quite well. I didn't have the questions in advanced but I knew what general areas we would cover. She would just bring her tape recorder over to our home and turn it off three and a half or four hours later and we had 20 of those sessions.

But she just asked the question and all the memories started flowing back. I was really shocked. There were things that I never could have guessed I would remember.

It must have been a good time for you to tell is all at once too.

It was, and there's a certain nice sense of closure of just being able to tell one's story and say, "Okay I've left a record of my service."

You mentioned that former Assemblymember Mike Feuer [now LA city attorney] rescued the state's court system at a Beverly Hills Bar Association meeting a few years ago. Tell us about what he did.

He was very much involved as a lawyer, and the husband of [Superior Court of Los Angeles County] Judge [Gail Ruderman Feuer], with keeping the court system operating and improving it, especially access to justice. He and I worked together on programs to extend access to justice to people who cannot afford a lawyer, and we have more and more of our population in that category.

What are some of those programs?

One of the programs is what's called a Sargent Shriver Civil Council Act. There is a constitutional right to counsel in criminal cases but not in civil cases, with very few exceptions. Basically in civil cases people have to fend for themselves if they can't afford counsel. I persuaded Governor [Arnold] Schwarzenegger to allocate some funding for a pilot project in California to provide funds for counsel. Not in the ordinary fender bender car collision case, but in areas where having or not having counsel could be crucial in vindicating one's fundamental rights, such as adoption, child custody, or other matters of that sort. Even though it was a bad year, I was able to persuade the governor to put that on his budget. Mike Feuer was instrumental along with a couple of other legislatures in persuading the legislature to pass it.

Along those same lines of court access, we recently interviewed BHBA President Diane Karpman, and she said that she doesn't think enough money will be funded to reopen the Beverly Hills Court House. What are some of the issues related to court funding?

It boils down to the governor and the legislature allocating enough money. There were some very bad years where cuts were made across the board, but I don't think the governor and the legislature are doing everything they could do and should do to restore some of the funding now that the funding is coming back to the coffers of the state. That just has to be done.

Tell us how you became the Chief Justice of California.

Actually, as a college student [I] intended to go into the foreign service of the state department. I was at Princeton's Woodrow Wilson's School of Public and International Affairs, which is supposed to prepare you for career in the Foreign Service, among other things.

In the summer between my sophomore and my junior year, I traveled to Africa with a friend of mine, whose father was in the Foreign Service. In the course of that summer, we were more or less hitchhiking around West Africa. [It] wasn't, strictly speaking, sticking one's thumb out by the side of the road, but finding out that an American Foreign Service officer, [a] British colonial officer, a missionary, or an African native was headed from one place to another, getting a ride with them, and traveling with them. It was quite an exciting summer. There were some villages we went [to] where I think they have not seen any Caucasians before.

In the course of that I ended up meeting some Foreign Service Officers and for a variety of reasons I became disillusioned with the idea [of] a career in the Foreign Service.

When I came back and started my junior year, not out of the noblest of motives, I decided to instead apply to law school as a way of postponing the decision of what I do with my career and leaving the greatest number of options open.

I went to Stanford Law School. [I] did not particularly like a lot of law school studies, but I loved constitutional law, that really intrigued me. Consequently, when I graduated I thought that the place I would most like to work would be in the California Department of Justice in the Attorney General's Office because you could, especially when dealing with criminal appeals, be [primarily] arguing constitutional issues.

I managed to handle some very big cases. I argued six times before the United States

Supreme Court as a young lawyer representing the State of California. I handled the prosecution in the California Supreme Court of Sirhan Sirhan, the assassin of Robert F. Kennedy. Through handling these major cases I came to the attention of the person who was then governor, Ronald Reagan, and he appointed me to the Los Angeles Municipal Courts. That just led one thing to another. Governor Jerry Brown elevated me to the Superior Court, then Governor [George] Deukmejian to the Court of Appeal, and Governor [Pete] Wilson to the Supreme Court first as an Associate Justice in 1991, and then as Chief Justice in 1996.

[Being] Chief Justice not only [involved] writing opinions issued by the court, [but also] running the Supreme Court itself. Those two tasks are quite manageable, but thirdly and most burdensome lay being in charge of what's the largest judicial system probably in the world. With double the size of the federal judiciary, [there were] more than 1,700 judges and 20,000 court employees, a budget before the recent cuts [that] was almost $4 billion, and frequent trips and crisis in Sacramento with budget cuts and trying to get programs through. I've visited the courts in all 58 counties of California my first year as Chief justice so those were very, very burdensome but worthwhile activities.

You've mentioned that many people do not know the three branches of governments. How should people become more involved and more informed?

I think it really start at the schools, and I don't think we're doing as good a job as we should in teaching history, and especially civics.

For four years I was on the steering committee of former Justice Sandra Day O'Connor's civics program and we had polling done. That was just shocking in terms of two out of three adult Americans not being able to identify the three branches of government: executive, legislative, and judicial. One out of three Americans [are] not able to identify even a single branch of government. Then a poll of high school students that in one instance showed that almost half, 45 percent, thought that in World War II the U.S. had fought alongside the Germans against Russia. The same high school students who were asked to identify any five US presidents in any order, and most couldn't do it, could identify five brands of designer jeans or sneakers. That shows something quite wrong and here we are trying to export our values to [the] third world, emerging countries, [and] new democracies when we don't understand our rights and responsibilities ourselves.

There's so much emphasis on science and math, which of course are important areas in there are federal rewards to school districts for achievement in those areas, but I think that at least of equal if not more importance is having our students understand as they become adult citizens what their rights and responsibilities are under our form of government.

You are a Beverly High graduate. Who inspired and influenced you on your career path?

[The late Beverly High social studies teacher] Salvatore Occhipinti really made history and civics education come alive. He interested me in public affairs and he'd quiz us on what was happening in the newspapers, Time, Newsweek and so forth. It wasn't just dry stuff. It was not done in an abstract way but he would make [a] living, breathing, [story] out of history so that made it very important. There was [also] Ms. Eunice [Schimdt] who taught literature.

I had [a former Hawthorne] English teacher Ms. Murphy [who] really taught me [a] great love for grammar and for parsing sentences. Being able to write well and correctly was a very important part of my training obviously for what I ultimately ended up doing.

Those were three teachers who sort of stick out in my mind from that far back. Don't forget I was class of 1957 so you ask me to go back quite a ways.

Your sons graduated from Beverly Hills as well. What are they up to?

Our eldest son Eric is managing a law firm Browne George Ross [LLP] in Century City that does business litigation. They're trial lawyers primarily.

Our middle son Andrew is a professional photographer and he has had exhibits in California and abroad as well.

Our youngest son Chris is in the business side of the entertainment industry and he specializes in focusing on literary properties and transforming them into film or television productions. His wife is Rebecca and they have two little daughters, Charlotte and Maya.

We've certainly encouraged them to find their own path, and we would be supportive that they should do what they wanted to do, it's just too important. I certainly didn't try to drill into any of the three of them that they should be lawyers.

How did you meet your wife, Barbara?

My wife, like myself and three sons, is a graduate of Beverly High, and she went to Hawthorne as well. She was the editor of [the student newspaper] "Highlights."

She was four years behind me [and] was class of 1961. We met through my sister, Rita George, who was also a classmate of my wife. The two of them were very close friends.

Barbara was also dating the next-door neighbor of mine, [who] would come to me for advice occasionally on how to deal with Barbara. Eventually, when that relationship broke up, I asked Barbara out. She was the first of my little sister's friends [who I asked] out on a date. We got engaged within a matter of a few months, and married in January 1966. She's been a real partner in my career as well as in other aspects of my 48-year marriage to her.

When I did my oral history and it was decided to turn that into a hardback book, she read through it twice and helped edit it.

What advice would you give people who want to pursue a similar route as you?

I think the best path I think in terms of being prepared for law school is to study history and to have a good use of the English language. I would say getting on the bench, having a very career legal experience, having experience in trial court and not just doing paperwork is very helpful, and being involved in community affairs as well because you need well-rounded people to serve on the bench.

What's in store for the future for you?

Now that I'm finished with the book and with having some appearances involving the book, I'm on two committees: Think Long for California [which] is trying to improve the structure of California government [and] coming up with some reforms; and I'm also on a United Nations commission that meets in different parts of the world every six months, coming up with some recommendations to update the United Nations Universal Charter of Human Rights. There had been advances in the last 65 years, especially in the areas of women's rights and gay rights, that probably suggest some revisions in the UN Declaration, although they would have to be adopted of course by the UN General Assembly. Then I'm continuing to work on the matter of civics education for young people.

NOTICE TO POTENTIAL BIDDERS: If you are considering bidding on this property lien, you should understand that there are risks involved in bidding at a trustee auction. You will be bidding on a lien, not on the property itself. Placing the highest bid at a trustee auction does not automatically entitle you to free and clear ownership of the property. You should also be aware that the lien being auctioned off may be a junior lien. If you are the highest bidder at the auction, you are or may be responsible for paying off all liens senior to the lien being auctioned off, before you can receive clear title to the property. You are encouraged to investigate the existence, priority, and size of outstanding liens that may exist on this property by contacting the county recorder's office or a title insurance company, either of which may charge you a fee for this information. If you consult either of these resources, you should be aware that the same lender may hold more than one mortgage or deed of trust on the property.
